Gov't Zoning Control Threat

The provincial government may move to exert control over municipal planning and zoning if certain local governments continue to block new housing developments, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said "three or four" municipalities have been blocking or purposely delaying applications for new housing developments to prevent heavy influxes of people into their areas.

Some municipalities charge developers impose fees, said Lorimer, which are meant to compensate for increased services necessitated by new housing areas.

But in some cases the extra fees have not been directly related to costs caused by the new developments and the fees have been a heavy burden for developers, he said.

Hundreds of developments have been affected in this way, he said, but most municipalities are not involved.

Lorimer pointed out that Ontario has legislation which gives the government some form of final control over municipal zoning and planning decision and warned that B.C. may have to take that route.

He said it might not have to be applied in blanket way but could be applied only to those municipalities which are blocking developments.

Asked outside the house if this could be termed a veiled threat to local governments to shape up, Lorimer said it was more like an "unveiled threat."

Lorimer would not name the municipalities involved.

Mines Deputy Named

Hart Horn, the former executive assistant to Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, has been appointed an associate deputy within the mines department.

Nimsick said in an interview Tuesday his department has been re-organized into three branches with Horn as associate deputy of the newest branch, operations.

Dr. J. T. Fyles will continue as associate deputy in charge of mines, John Lineham as associate deputy in charge of petroleum resources and John McMynn will continue as a full deputy in charge of all three branches.

Horn, 38, was originally hired by the NDP soon after it came to office to serve as Nimsick's executive assistant, a job usually considered a political appointment.

In November, 1973, Horn resigned as executive assistant and took over a civil service job as director of the revenue branch in charge of collecting mineral royalties.

In his new role, Horn will be in charge of operations, said Nimsick, which will include administration, economic development and revenues.

As director of revenues, Horn earned between $20,900 and $23,000 and Nimsick said the new job will pay a different salary but it has not been determined yet.

Horn has a masters degree in economics from the University of Calgary.

$70,200 ROLLS A SELL-OUT

LONDON (UPI) — Rolls-Royce came out with its latest model today, a two-door luxury car that costs $70,200 — including tax — and already is sold out for at least a year.

Sight unseen, 120 persons from the Shah of Iran to anonymous U.S. businessmen have filed orders for the carpeted, air-conditioned, stereo-equipped, leather-upholstered, walnut-panelled, 17-foot Camargue.

The automobile, named for a region of southern France, will get 14 miles to the gallon.

Each car takes six months to assemble. Production at first is at the rate of one a week, later to go to two a week, meaning it will be at least a year before the first wave of orders are filled.

The company reckons the first Camargues could fetch nearly $100,000 on the automotive black market.

The Camargue is the result of three years of secret designing, research and testing. It is of Italian design, with the 17-foot body of soft aluminum done in Britain. The radio and quadraphonic stereo is from West Germany, solicitor-general Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

With a 6,750-cc aluminum alloy V-8 engine, automatic transmission, fully independent suspension, power steering and disc brakes, the Camargue can reach 120 miles an hour.

Rolls said it contains more engineering and electronic sophistication than has been packed into any other car. It is said to "think" for itself, even tightening the passenger's seat belts on tight turns.

The walnut panelling is from trees hand-picked in Italy. The upholstery is from a special herd of Rolls-Royce cattle kept behind electronic fences and not barbed wire so as not to mar the hide.

"You must not look upon a Rolls-Royce as a car, as a collection of metal and brilliant ideas," company official Evan Morgans said. "It's a dream."

Three persons have been convicted and two others are awaiting trial on a variety of charges, including fraud, as a result of the police investigation into irregularities at the Hamilton harbour.

Allmand said the police probe in Hamilton led to the investigation at Quebec City since some of the dredging companies working in Hamilton were involved also in dredging work at the Orleans River in Quebec City.

"And now there's been evidence that leads the police to suspect some matters in other places," he said.

"These suspicions could prove negative or positive. But because there is certain evidence that there might be something wrong, they are investigating."

Wider Harbor Probe

OTTAWA (UPI) — The RCMP has broadened its investigation into harbor dredging contracts beyond Hamilton, Ont., and Quebec City, solicitor-general Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

It would hamper the police investigations into price-fixing of contracts if he was of divulge where the probes were taking place, he added.

Three persons have been convicted and two others are awaiting trial on a variety of charges, including fraud, as a result of the police investigation into irregularities at the Hamilton harbour.

Allmand said the police probe in Hamilton led to the investigation at Quebec City since some of the dredging companies working in Hamilton were involved also in dredging work at the Orleans River in Quebec City.

"And now there's been evidence that leads the police to suspect some matters in other places," he said.

U.S. Evacuation Plans Prepared

Times News Services

The U.S. carrier Okinawa with helicopters and 1,500 marines aboard has been ordered into the Gulf of Thailand as a precaution to evacuate Americans from the besieged Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh if necessary, Pentagon sources said today.

As a last resort, the marines would go in to secure the airport at Phnom Penh, to allow evacuation of civilians by military transport, the sources said.

Contingency planning for the evacuation of some 400 to 500 Americans still in Phnom Penh called for a four-step operation, according to the situation, they added.

—Use of military transport if Communist activity becomes too dangerous for civil craft.

—Marine helicopters from the Okinawa which could approach to within 75-100 air-miles from Phnom Penh.

—Send in the marines to protect the airport itself during final evacuation, if a crisis point is reached.

The Pentagon stressed that all alternatives were contingency plans and no evacuation has actually been ordered.

Meanwhile, Communist insurgents brought up guns to within four miles of the Phnom Penh airport today and slammed in a barrage of artillery, rockets and recoilless rifle fire that halted all commercial air traffic.

The barrage did not slow the U.S. airlift of rice, ammunition and gasoline. Commercial planes chartered by the U.S. military took off and landed at the rate of one every eight minutes.

One plane was hit by rocket shrapnel and sustained minor damage, but flew back to safety.

Military officers said five persons were killed and at least five wounded in attacks on the airport.

The last commercial flight into the airport today was an Air Cambodia twin-engine jet Caravelle.

Passengers aboard the plane said they saw two rocket bursts from the air while the plane circled to land and another burst as they filed into the heavily sandbagged airport.

In a related Washington development, the State Department says that when Congress cut off the bombing of Cambodia in 1973, it "aborted" a promising effort by Henry Kissinger to negotiate a peace settlement.

Spokesman Robert Anderson was not specific Tuesday in his public response to a request for new diplomatic efforts from a congressional group which visited Indochina last week.

He said Kissinger tried continually in the past two years to get peace in Cambodia.

MOUNTIES TAKE OVER ABOARD THE ANSWER

Times News Services

Royal Canadian Mounted Police today took control of the runaway freighter — Answer which has led authorities on an 11-day chase through the ice floes of St. Lawrence.

An RCMP spokesman said officers landed by helicopter on an ice floe near the vessel and boarded it near the Magdalen Islands, arresting skipper Brian Erb, 37.

Some of the 23 crew-members were airlifted from the Answer to a Canadian Forces base on Prince Edward Island.

The takeover apparently ended the ship's dash for freedom which began when Erb and his crew sailed it out of Quebec City Feb. 23.

"I feel pretty sure in saying we're pretty determined to stay aboard her at this time," one RCMP official said.

Hydro Eyes Terminal Site

B.C. Hydro is negotiating to purchase property on the east side of Douglas Street, across from its Garibaldi Road bus garage, in what appears to be the first move toward establishment of a downtown transit terminal.

Hydro and transit bureau officials confirmed today that the property in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel-Topaz block is being acquired, but declined to say for what specific purpose it will be used.

However, a spokesman in the office of Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said it is intended to relocate to that site the provincially-owned Vancouver Island Coach Lines bus garage, which now occupies property leased from Canadian Pacific at Douglas and Belleville.

The official was asked if the reason for the move was to free the Douglas-Belleville location for development of a downtown transit terminal, and replied that it "paves the way" for that possibility.

For well over a year the provincial transit bureau has been studying possible sites for such a depot, and at one time was considering adapting the old Crystal Garden building. But the city of Victoria, owners of the property, made it clear the proposal was unacceptable.

City planning and traffic officials approached by the Times were unaware of the pending property transaction, and said there had been no recent communication from transit bureau director Victor Parker concerning plans for a downtown depot.

An official in Hydro's property development department in Vancouver said a number of tenants occupying premises in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel area on short-term leases have had their former tenancy agreements terminated and have been asked to contact Hydro to indicate whether they wish to continue renting.

Bob Shanks, owner of Shanks' saddlery store at Douglas and Market, said his business will continue at that location for the foreseeable future and he has been instructed to "pay our rent to Hydro."

Other business tenants include the Empress Paints store at 720 Market.

Dave Suttle, Hydro transit manager in Victoria, said the "major part of the property" will be developed for use by the bureau of transit, while other temporary uses of the site would be related to "internal changes in our organization."

He gave no details, but another source told the Times that Hydro's line and construction departments may make interim use of the site.

She has pressed for open negotiations, refused by the union, since the board began to discuss contract talks in October.

If Shirley said there's an agreement, it's an agreement by the union," said board chairman Gordon Hutcheson today.

"It seems to me all we've got is a little more than a rumor."

Hutcheson added the board will likely go along with the agreement proposed by the mediator.

RCMP spokesman Al Baugh said it was the "largest seizure" in the history of the Arctic.

RCMP spokesman said 350 pounds of hashish would have a street-value of between $500,000 and $1.5 million.

BERGER PROBE PLOWING AHEAD

YUKON (CP) — It was business as usual here Tuesday as Mr. Justice Thomas Berger resumed his inquiry into an application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. for a right-of-way across Crown lands for a 2,600-mile natural gas pipeline through Northern Canada.

Government statements Monday that Ottawa might not wait for the judge's report on the social, economic and environmental effects of the $7-million project before approving the pipeline were ignored both at the inquiry and in public statements by the Berger team.

Asked about reports that Berger might resign over statements by the Commons by Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Judge Berger seemed totally absorbed in evidence of three expert witnesses dealing with the pipeline.

With background information on the rivers, permafrost and other aspects of the Arctic environment that lie in the path of the pipeline designed to bring Mackenzie Delta and Alaska gas to southern markets.

If federal cabinet ministers are trying to put down the importance of the Berger inquiry as charged by NDP Parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent and others, the judge could claim victory Tuesday.

Through commission counsel Ian Scott, the inquiry was told Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan pledged earlier in the day that all expert witnesses in the federal public service will be made available at government expense to the inquiry.

Scott was accepting an invitation by Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve to make available all of the studies and experts in her department dealing with the pipeline.

Parents and others are being asked to join COPE — Citizens Organization for Education — to sweep floors.

The plan starts Thursday.

School District 61 chairman Bill Ross said schools with automatic heating may remain open all day if there is sufficient response to a nine-hour day and a four-day week, with civic employees.

Members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. Council said the days could be staggered to cover weekends, which means overtime will not be paid for working Saturday.

Schools without heat are:

keepers, day workers, auto mechanics, insurance salesmen and workers in the engineering professions.

About 30 new listings come in each day for these type of jobs.

There is little outdoor activity in agriculture except for daffodils which are nearing harvest.

Victoria area foundries, machine shops and metal fabricating plants continue to be fairly busy with no increase in orders expected.

Logging and sawmill activity continues on a reduced scale. A modest increase in orders for wood products is expected in the spring.

The Victoria area is moving into its busy construction period for houses but work is being hampered by the continuing strike of civic workers. Only 38 building permits were issued in Victoria last month, down from 366 the previous February.

Autoplan Blamed for February Sales Slump

Sales were down for Victoria furniture and department stores in February and some retailers blamed car insurance renewals for draining off funds that normally would have gone into consumer goods, according to a survey by Canada Manpower.

"Business was rather spotty and several dealers reported that they felt sales were in fact slowing down," Manpower information director John Atcheson said.

Car insurance premiums had to be paid in full this year rather than being financed through the Royal Bank as in 1974.

The effect of paying in full was to remove $110 million from the provincial economy in February, according to a department store chain. About $13 million was removed from the Victoria economy in insurance premiums.

There is an ongoing demand for waiters, waitresses, house-

Daily's Fired Researchers Detail Harassment Technique

Members of the education department's research and development division were harassed to the point of having personal mail opened in the weeks before they were fired.

Three of the five last remaining members of the division, fired last week by Education Minister Eileen Daily, made the charge Tuesday in their first public statement since their dismissal.

Jean Burgess, one of the five researchers fired six weeks after the dismissal of division head Stanley Knight, said in the last few weeks the group was "very closely supervised."

No phone calls were allowed in or out of the division's offices, she said, and no meetings were allowed between the members without permission of department supervisors.

All mail was re-routed and some personal mail was even opened, said Burgess.

The former researcher said of an incident where she was ordered to go to the Queen Charlotte Islands to discuss a project with the local school board and was then paged at the airport and told to return immediately to Victoria without talking with the school board.

The division's old office has already been dismantled and files have been locked away in the Douglas Building, she said.

The five members were fired last Thursday and Burgess said that by evening a security guard was posted outside their old offices.

Clerical staff associated with the branch has been transferred to other departments, she said, and two consultants working with the group were told not to return to work Monday.

When consultants Gary Onstead and Paul McGeachie returned Monday they found all Onstead's material including personal papers had been removed and locked away with other division files.

Onstead and McGeachie met separately with Daily Tuesday to discuss their fate.

The point where she cannot implement any of the NDP's educational policies.

McGeachie said the discussions involved what new functions the consultants might have and more meetings will be held with Daily. Onstead was not available for comment.

Two of the researchers fired last week, Ken Novakowski and Jack Hutton have chosen to file grievances through the B.C. Government Employees' Union and are therefore making no public statements about the dismissals.

The others, Burgess, George Smith and Margaret Reed have expressed a willingness to make public statements as long as they do not hurt the grievance case.

Knight, whose firing in January started the controversy over the new division, has also filed a grievance through the Public Service Commission.

The two union members are basing their grievance on the grounds there was no just cause outlined for their dismissal.

Burgess, Smith and Reed described B.C.'s education system as being "in a mess."

Forces Use MPs To Pass Pickets

Times News Services

HALIFAX — Military authorities have used their own security personnel and civilian police to escort "essential" supply vehicles through federal blue collar workers in Nova Scotia, a spokesman for the Canadian Armed Forces said here Tuesday.

Regional officials of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which represents the strikers, have been claiming the armed forces here has been using military and civilian personnel as strike breakers at the numerous area defence installations where the blue collar workers normally are employed.

The charge has been denied by military spokesmen in Ottawa.

Mail and airport services in the country continue to be hampered by rotating PSAC strikes.

PSAC spokesman Bill Doherty said in Ottawa Tuesday he will ask the Canadian Labor Congress and regional federation of labor leaders to persuade more unions to honor picket lines set up by federal labor and trades workers.

In Victoria, the ministry of transport's vessels Camsell and Douglas were able to leave port today because picketers at the marine base on Harbor Road arrived after the crews of the two ships were aboard.

The Camsell was to have

Apartment Theft Probed

Victoria police are continuing their investigation into the theft early Monday of more than $8,900 from the office of the Vista Royale apartments, 1345 Pandora.

William Hale, manager of the 62-unit apartment, said the office had been broken into sometime between midnight Sunday and 8:15 a.m. Monday.

A cardboard file case which contained the money had been rifled. The receipts included $3,517 cash and $5,402 cheques, police said.

sailed Monday, transporting anti-pollution equipment to Vancouver for a training exercise but her crew refused to cross picket lines set up by members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

She is now sending aids in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the Douglas is in the Sand Heads Patrol area.

The Alberta Wheat Pool's grain elevator at Ogden Point has been closed down since federal workers walked off the job 10 days ago.

The elevator is about half full.

"They've shut us down completely," said manager Sam Rycroft. Under normal conditions, he said, 24 boxcars were unloaded each day.

He reported PSAC members were crossing picket lines to establish their own.

"It's the first time I've known picketers cross a picket line to picket," he said.

"The longshoremen are picking on Dallas road and they have to go through to picket here."

Residents Flee Fire

A fire in the 28-unit Hyrcroft Arms condominium at 1157 Fairfield late Tuesday forced residents, many in their night clothing, to flee the building.

Victoria deputy fire chief R.J. Coates said today the fire broke out in a locker in a storage room on the bottom floor and spread to adjacent materials and the ceiling.

To accept the offer would widen the discrepancy between civic employees in this area and those in private industry, other municipal jurisdictions and the provincial government service, Smith said.

A heat sensing device in the ceiling triggered the alarm at 11:47 p.m.

Coates said firemen had the blaze quickly under control but heavy smoke on the lower floors kept residents waiting outside for more than an hour before they were allowed back into the building.

Coates said damage was "tentatively" set at $10,000.

The locker, owned by A.H. Hall, contained suitcases, paintings, books and cardboard cartons, Coates said.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

the weather

A weak disturbance brought a few showers of rain and wet snow to the north coast today. Elsewhere most areas are sunny.

No active weather systems are expected to enter B.C. on Thursday. Most regions will have sunny skies and light winds. The present temperature pattern will persist.

Lorenz Relates Six-Day Blindfolded, Handcuffed Ordeal

Lorenz... mopping brow

Times News Services

BERLIN — Pete Lorenz kidnapped six days ago, said today that his urban guerrilla captors held him the entire time in a cellar cell somewhere in the city, handcuffed and blindfolded.

The kidnappers released the 52-year-old Lorenz at midnight with a sack over his head, then disappeared in the city, successfully evading a police sweep that began immediately.

Police carried out a massive manhunt (right) that netted 155 persons. Most were released after their identities were checked.

Looking tired but calm he told a news conference that throughout his ordeal "I had faith in God but I was afraid."

His greatest worry was that the authorities would find it impossible to meet all the leftist kidnappers' demands, including the release and flight out of the country of jailed anarchists.

"I had to reckon with the possibility that I would be killed," he said.

Lorenz said the kidnappers kept some of his private papers and all of his money except for a 20 mark note (worth $8.50) and enough coins to call his wife from a telephone booth.

Several influential members of Lorenz' Christian Democratic party have demanded reimposition of the death penalty as a deterrent to further kidnappings.

Police told the news conference that "I was, I am and I will continue to be opposed to reinstatement of the death penalty."

Lorenz said the kidnappers overpowered him in his car early Thursday. With two holding him and a third sitting on him, they gave him two injections, one in an arm, the second in his left leg. Lorenz said,

"While I was not numb, neither was I fully conscious."

Lorenz said he was given sufficient food and his basement cell had toilet and washing facilities.

He talked with his masked abductors and was even given newspapers — "but everything written about his case was cut out. Sometimes I had only the sports pages."

The 52-year-old conservative opposition leader was freed at a suburban park six hours after former mayor Heinrich Albertz, who had accompanied five anarchists to freedom in South Yemen, returned to tell the kidnappers all their conditions had been met.

Lorenz was tied to a bench, but freed himself and walked to a telephone kiosk to inform his wife, Marianne, he was free.

Papers 'Year Old'

Documents relating to the Columbia River Treaty cost re-allocation committee were forwarded to Resources Minister Bob Williams a year ago, according to a former government consultant.

Williams has repeatedly contended he did not know about the "secret" B.C. Hydro committee until a CBC documentary revealed its existence on Feb. 16.

In the legislature Tuesday, Williams again repeated he had not seen the committee's files until the issue was raised on the floor of the house subsequent to the CBC program.

Asked, however, when the files had come into his possession, Williams said he didn't have that date.

The minister revealed earlier this week that the source of the committee's files was Prof. Ian McDougall of Dalhousie University who worked for the government for several months in 1973-74 studying financial and legal questions surrounding the Columbia River Treaty.

McDougall said Tuesday he obtained a copy of the committee's files from a locked cabinet in Hydro offices about a year ago and he assumed, from the way they were stored, and the fact senior Hydro officials were unaware of their existence, that the committee had been secret.

A copy of the committee's files was sent to Williams at that time, along with other backup material, said McDougall, and the committee was also mentioned in his main report presented to the government in the spring.

Williams told the house Tuesday he will not file that final report with the legislature.

McDougall has also cleared up controversy over the title page on the committee file of memos.

The professor said the page with the word "confidential" was typed by his secretary to ensure the file was kept confidential by his staff and people he sent copies of the file to.

The title page is the only one in the file which indicates the committee might have been secret, and opposition members raised some questions about the page since it appears to have been typed on a different machine.

No Plans To Spur Economy

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister John Turner says he has no immediate plans to boost Canada's slumping economy despite the largest quarterly decline in the gross national product since the 1961 recession.

Decisions about applying new stimulus to the economy would depend on what the U.S. administration does to stimulate the American economy, he said.

Casa Loma Questions

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson spoke the truth 10 days ago when he talked of the "political flak" he knew would be generated by the government's purchase of the Casa Loma motel-apartment project in Burnaby, a project with a past history of financial troubles.

Ever since the deal was first announced more than two weeks ago, the minister has been hit with flak and more flak. Most of it seems to have been generated by himself. After the $3,177,000 purchase was announced, B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson said the government could have bought it for $1 million less a few months earlier.

It couldn't be confirmed whether the complex was on the market previously at $2.5 million.

But then the news came out that the government bought the project—giving the owners a profit estimated between $400,000 and $700,000—after the owners had settled with 51 subcontractors who worked on it, paying them 40 cents on the dollar for bills totalling $390,000.

(One of the subcontractors has since filed a writ in supreme court asking damages from the original owners. The writ says the owners "executed and dealt in a fictitious and fraudulent cost-plus building contract . . . intended to mislead the creditors.")

The latest bit of information is that the actual cost of the project will be $3,528,000—rather different from the lower price which Nicolson stressed in the legislature a week ago was for "completed construction." Now, a week later he says the extra $351,000 is for the administrative costs of Dunhill Development Corp., the Crown corporation which made the deal, construction costs of double-glazing some windows (to keep out traffic noise)—now intended for the elderly, the Casa Loma project is on a busy, noisy thoroughfare and altering suites for handicapped tenants and interest charges.

In the legislature, Nicolson and his NDP colleagues on the government benches acted most insulted and put out when an opposition M.L.A., Don Phillips (SC-South Peace River), charged the minister had deliberately misled the legislature. He withdrew the charge. But what other conclusion can an intelligent person reach after considering the facts? Even if he did set out intentionally to mislead the public, Nicolson could have done no better job than he accomplished with his sorry showing over the past two weeks.

If the minister had been a bit more candid about the whole deal, he could have saved himself a lot of subsequent embarrassment. As it stands now, with so many differing statements, judicious leaks and facts pulled reluctantly from him like gold teeth, he has left no alternative but a full-scale investigation by some neutral agency.

NDP Aid to Private Schools

Budget speeches might be compared to a medicine man's bag of tricks.

Bat wings and monkey dust abound. The dialectics that accompany the ju-ju employ a feint here, a puff of white smoke there, and all kinds of mysteries that only become apparent after initiation or when the medicine man sees fit.

Two paragraphs in Premier Barret's budget speech fall under the above category, and while the words are opaque, a highly placed government personage says they are one of the most significant things in the budget.

"It is our belief that it is the government's responsibility to provide basic services to all children regardless of where these children are being educated," Barrett said in the speech.

With that in mind he has appointed a six-member cabinet committee "... to decide what these basic services should be and how they could be provided."

The committee, which has to report by August 1, will also consider expansion of bus service to all school children including those outside the public school system.

Interesting. Barrett and Education Minister Eileen Daily have expressed sympathy for independent schools in the past, but party stand has discouraged any initiatives up to this point.

That the government was slightly uncomfortable in its dismissal of independent school appeals was apparent in Daily's white paper entitled Directions For Change—a paper that is getting a little yellow around the edges.

"The opportunity for suitable education should be provided to all children," intoned the paper.

Social Credit refused to aid private schools too and kept the issue at bay for 20 years. Ironically, one of the strongest Social Credit ridings in the province, Chilliwack, the former stronghold of Ken Kiernan, and now represented by Harvey Schroeder, has a strong tradition of independent Mennonite schools.

Even if the cabinet committee recommends only subsidized bus service for independent schools, it will be a historic reversal of British Columbia's educational policies.

But independent school federation association secretary Gerry Ensing has expressed tion promises," he said, referring to the two paragraphs in the budget speech.

Ensing is not hopeful about legal recognition and full financial support, but he would like to see money for audio visual aids and regional resource centres.

"Libraries are part of the service government should provide . . . what we need is hard cash," he added.

Just how much hard cash will go to the 23,000 students in independent schools is impossible to tell. But the inclusion of expanded bus service to children "outside the public school system" indicates at least some change.

At present not even an inspection system exists for independent schools. Any self-styled teacher can set up whatever kind of institution he wishes. And that's another point. Will financial aid mean loss of independence?

The busing statement is probably a trial balloon. How far the committee will go in recommending financial aid may well depend on public reaction.

So far the medicine man has only signalled his intentions by shaking rattles. It will be interesting to see the whole performance and how it goes down with the tribe—a group which is not historically noted for its tolerance.

Preserve the Greenbelt

That report on behalf of the Capital Regional Board, financed and under contract to the federal forestry department, recommending preservation of the 18 mile waterfront greenbelt between Jordan River and Port Renfrew deserves support. Through inertia, indifference and neglect by the former Social Credit government beach access between Sooke and Jordan River has been seriously curtailed over the years as more and more of the waterfront fell into private hands. Only French Beach has survived as a major recreational area close to the Greater Victoria area, and that came about thanks to the NDP government which purchased and developed the property for the public.

Most of the Jordan River—Port Renfrew strip between road and sea is currently under lease to logging companies. Considering its recreational, as compared to its logging value, the Capital Regional board in conjunction with the provincial parks branch should waste no time in trying to acquire the relatively narrow 18 mile strip. Experience has proven that delays result in alienating waterfront as people reach further out in search of privacy.

In 1973 more than 44,000 persons used recreational facilities provided by B.C. Forest Products at Port Renfrew, a 35 per cent increase over 1972. At French Beach, west of Jordan River visitor figures have more than tripled in two years. These figures will increase as population increases putting heavy pressures on existing facilities. With a population approaching 380,000 forecasted in less than 30 years it is unthinkable that such a relatively unsullied stretch of coastline would be allowed to fall into private hands.

The report's recommended development of short automobile access spurs and foot paths to the beaches—as practised at French Beach—is also good in that it prevents people from hauling in all the accoutrements of civilization, much of which seems to be left behind.

The various levels of government should not let this report moulder, but coordinate their efforts and undertake the necessary negotiations.

Medicare Again

I did not say that Dr. Ireland advocated the abolition of medicare. In my letter I asked the good doctor if he felt we should consider such a step. In my view the two chief achievements of the 20 years of Socred government were the introduction of medicare and the hospital insurance plan. I would remind Dr. Ireland that prior to the introduction of medicare there was great opposition from B.C. doctors to the plan. Surely Dr. Ireland does not wish to return to the good old days of medical care based on one's ability to pay and the situation which exists south of the border where an unemployed person in South Carolina gave birth to a child in the ambulance as she could not obtain medical care although 20 doctors were approached and the hospitals would not admit her without the authorization of a doctor? Her family was said to have owed a doctor $350.

I accept the fact that there has been abuse in the use of medicare but I feel doctors can be more effective in stopping this than some statement from the government although I would like the government to take some such action.

I thank Dr. Ireland for his suggestions for the good health of my children. I am now 75, have not smoked 25 cigarettes in my life and still can wade and fish in our rivers for some seven hours per day. In addition I lead a very busy life in sport and social work. I might add that I am a very modest consumer of alcohol. That was the example I tried to give my children.

I still maintain that the graduating doctor and those coming to B.C. should be obliged to spend some three years in the interior where their services are desperately needed. This arrangement could be based on a voluntary or firm basis.

I note that there are some doctors who practise in B.C. and are not members of the B.C. Medical Association. It would be interesting to know the numbers involved. However the BCMA bargains as representative of the doctors and the agreements reached are the norm for all doctors of the province. Accordingly the BCMA, in fact, controls the working conditions of the medical profession in the province.

I still maintain that the BCMA and other such bodies are the strongest associations in Canada and to justify this statement I would remind Dr. Ireland that, as far as I know, only the government of Saskatchewan has confronted the doctors and this resulted in the "withholding of services" by the doctors of the province with the ardent backing of the American Medical Association.

Montana Pipers

I am writing a book on Scottish bagpipers who emigrated to Montana during the frontier days. Over 100 pipers went there between 1860 and 1930.

I was sorry to hear that the Hippocratic oath has not been used for many years. I think that this is a backward step as the oath is a very fine basis for the principles of the dedicated doctor

Can anyone tell me about pipers among the trappers and mountain men before 1860: the pipe bands and Highland games in Great Falls, Billings, Butte and Miles City before World War One: champion piper and dancer D. C. Mather, and A. K. Cameron, Tom MacRae, Donald Sutherland, Farquhar Finlayson and John Renwick?

Also, can anyone tell me about Dr. Tom McKenzie's Miles City piping organization, dedicated to serious piobroch study; a highland dancer named Neil Livingstone MacLardy; A. K. Cameron's research in piobroch history and theory, and his links with Willie Gray, Simon Fraser, J. D. Ross Watt and other pipers around the world; and the activities of Mather, who travelled to the Vancouver area and other parts of the Northwest? Who has the papers of Boston pipemaker Adamson? Can anyone confirm a story that pipers died with Custer? I will welcome correspondence from anyone who has information about Scottish activities in Montana.—John Pearson, 23 Crannagh Street, Glasgow G12, Scotland.

Union Badly Paid

First of all I'd like to thank the Rev. Richard J. Norsworthy of the Unitarian Church (Feb. 27) for coming up from the United States to tell us ignorant Canadians that the oath is an excellent outline of that mission.

Dr. Ireland points out that doctors' incomes have not increased in the same way as some other sectors of our society. However, I would point out that doctors still head the national salary scale by a very wide margin. I do not begrudge this as a doctor works long hours and has spent many years in obtaining his education and skills. However I am wondering how much (in all sectors of our society) is enough in the midst of a large number of people who live in very distressing circumstances? — M. P. B. Wixson, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

JUBILEE HOSPITAL
... highly dedicated

and I thank heavens that most doctors are highly dedicated. In my view, a doctor has a special mission in our society and that the oath is an excellent outline of that mission.

Now perhaps he would condescend to consider a few facts.

CUPE has unionized workers in the public sector which have been traditionally badly paid. Many people feel that public employees should work for less because they are paid out of taxes but public employees have the same expenses as other workers, including taxes.

If they accept wages a great deal lower than other workers they are, in effect, subsidizing other taxpayers by their unpaid labor.

The public does not seem to realize that they are paying the wages of workers in the private sector as well, the clerks at Safeway, B.C. Tel workers, etc. When you go to Safeway and buy your groceries you are paying the clerks more per hour than the outside workers are asking.

When you pay your telephone and hydro bills you are paying the workers far more per hour than what CUPE is asking for their men in comparable jobs.

The public sector of the work force has great difficulty getting satisfactory wage settlements because the employer does not lose money during the strike.

And who are these "extortionist union leaders" that Norsworthy rants on about? They are ordinary workers who are working long hours during the strike trying to get a settlement that will satisfy the membership. If they had recommended acceptance of the offer made by city hall they would have been out on their ears (as indeed happened in the case of the inside workers).

If Rev. Norsworthy is not afraid of being contaminated by associating with outside workers I suggest we arrange a meeting with some of them and get the other side of the story. — Mrs. Godfrey Doherty (striker's wife), 2745 Fifth Street.

Comic Effect

First, congratulations to Labatt's for initiative and courage shown in their idea to restore the brewery on Government Street. It was a good idea that somehow went astray in the final stages. The sandblasting was good, as long as the bricks were re-faced and the mortar re-pointed. Otherwise both bricks and mortar will crumble and erode, as they have done on the Lascelles Building (Cost-Plus Imports). The use of copper sheeting looks good although I doubt it existed on the original building. The final statement made by the new peaked roof and finials is almost ludicrous. The roof is oddly out of proportion and the finials are so weak that they disappear when viewed from more than a block away. It is a shame that the execution of the restoration was not more in tune with the original building, as I am sure a lot of money was spent to achieve the present slightly comical effect. — T. Palfrey, 3158 Jackson Street.

Praise The Light

Mr. Hedges, whose letter on Brazil you reprinted from the Sun, is incorrect when he says that Brascan is "the Toronto-based firm which controls Brazilian energy production."

Light-Servicos de Eletricidade S.A., or The Light, as it is known in Brazil, generates, transmits and supplies electric power over two areas in southern Brazil including the two great cities of Sao Paulo and Rio. But the rates it charges and the rate of return on its capital are set by the Brazilian federal power agency, Electrobras. Moreover, under Brazilian law, the greater part of the profits it makes must be re-invested in Brazil. The Light is a subsidiary of Brascan. It is quite reasonable that having regard to the requirement to re-invest in Brazil, Brascan should team up with so well-run a company as Mac-Millan Bloedel.

More than 60 per cent of the power requirements of The Light are purchased from Electrobras, which is now the sole agency for the construction of new power plants. One of these plants now under construction on the Parana River will, when completed in 1982, provide 11,700 megawatts, making it by far the largest hydroelectric plant in the world.

With Brascan, the links between Canada and Brazil go back as far as 1899, a co-operation which has been mutually beneficial, particularly to Brazil. Owing to the increasingly hostile attitude to business fostered by the federal and provincial governments, we can expect to see much more Canadian capital leaving this country, especially to the United States.

As to the social and political conditions in Brazil, it is not to be expected in turbulent a continent as South America, that the same harmony between all strata of society, between employers and employees, between individuals and governments, or the same respect for law and order and property, or for the sanctity of life will exist in Brazil as in Canada. No, indeed not.—J. P. Thorn-ton, 943 Wilmer Street.

Garbage For Ottawa

Regardless of what the health experts say, the garbage piling up is a health hazard and beginning to stink. The citizens of Esquimalt and the other affected municipalities should demand that the city authorities secure five freight cars, load them with the garbage, consign same to Ottawa, charges collect, attention prime minister's office and tell him to get rid of it, because in a situation like this affecting the health of citizens there is time to stop playing politics. Strong action should be taken to bring this CUPE strike to a close and put some backbone into our present administration or get out and let some other party take over—let us get back on a sensible course before it is too late. — L. J. Kirkham, 816 Hutchinson Avenue.

The Chinese are boycotting the Japanese steamships operating between Victoria and the Orient which is the subject of much comment among local agents who represent trans-Pacific companies. The Mikado's government is demanding certain concessions from Peking as a result of the capture of Tsing Tau from Germany, and the report has spread abroad here that the Chinese, who have occasion to cross the Pacific, will refuse to sail on Japanese vessels until the controversy is settled satisfactorily. In Vancouver, Chinese have refused to do business with Japanese merchants, a state of affairs which exists in other North American centres with large Chinese populations.

Learning to Live With Nuclear Waste

By CHARLES FOLEY
London Observer

JACKASS FLATS, Nevada — "Sure radiation can kill. But then so can alcohol. A big martini will do more harm to your genes than small amounts of radiation." Tour guide David Miller is taking our busload of day-trippers around what we'd always supposed to be one of the most secret places in the United States: the Nevada atomic test site. But secrecy, it seems, can be sacrificed when the Atomic Energy Commission wants to convince people that they can learn to live with nuclear power.

"You see," explains Miller, "the nuclear age got off to a bad start, with the Bomb. But fear of radiation is largely fear of the unknown. Suppose electricity had come in with the electric chair. People would be pretty alarmed by electricity, wouldn't they?" Miller's captive audience ponders that one in silence. Barren sand and sagebrush stream past the bus windows, stretching out as far as the eye can see across Jackass Flats.

The AEC has a plan for this desolate countryside. It wants to put up a new Stonehenge, a cluster of steel-and-concrete columns, each weighing about 55 tons, over several hundred acres of desert. Their cores will consist of deadly radioactive wastes, the leftovers from three decades of making "bombs" and building nuclear reactors around the nation, which will remain highly toxic for hundreds of thousands of years. So, in hopes of dispelling some of the talk about "death factories" and possible disasters, the AEC has invited the public to take bus tours of the area, some 100 miles north of Las Vegas, the nation's gambling capital.

Tours Sold Out

Reserve your place well in advance: all seats are sold out for next Friday's weekly trip, and if the AEC keeps it up, the tour seems set to rival Nevada's Hoover Dam as an attraction for refugees from Las Vegas' gaming tables. As the first two buses, carrying 92 people, entered the gate of the vast test area — larger than Rhode Island — the other day, workmen were replacing the AEC's sign with one that read "U.S. Energy Research Development Agency." Guides explained that this wasn't an alias: the new name covered the fact that ERDA would be responsible for developing all energy resources, not only nuclear but solar, tidal, geothermal, oil shale, and the rest.

Nuclear power plants, however, remain the spearhead of Operation Independence, the plan to make America self-reliant in energy, and ERDA is most anxious to sell Nevadans on the idea of having the deadly rubbish dump in their backyard. Something like 90 million gallons of wastes containing strontium 90, cesium 137, and plutonium 239 will be generated by the year 2000, and scientists admit that they don't yet know any safe way to dispose of the stuff.

"All we can do for the moment," says an AEC spokesman, "is store the material in a retrievable manner." Such as the Nevedan Stonehenge, which tour guides say will be able to hold, on a few hundred acres, all the wastes produced by the 54 nuclear reactors to be licensed in the U.S. from now until 2001. There are in fact three interim storage plans under study, but Stonehenge appears most favoured.

The AEC is already in trouble over its handling of wastes from America's nuclear weapons program, which caused 43 atomic bombs to be exploded (84 in the air, 350 underground) at the Nevada test site. Most of that material was stored in steel tanks at Hanford, in the state of Washington. Seventeen of these tanks have sprung leaks in the past 18 years. "The leaks are going to get worse and worse," says Frank Pittman, director of the AEC's waste management division, "until the tanks eventually decay away completely, in how many decades we just don't know." There isn't much anyone can do about a million-gallon tank buried deep underground and leaking lethal plutonium waste — except get out of the way.

But one can try to avoid such a thing happening again. Wastes would be brought here, for example, in solid form, greatly reducing the chances of leakage. Containment technolology has improved, and security of plants and shipments has been tightened up. At the Nevada test site visitors are told that intensified security includes more roving patrols, electronic sensors, full-circuit TV and several radio nets, to guard against sabotage or theft of bomb-making materials.

Dump sites like Jackass Flats, however, are merely the AEC's way of buying time until a permanent solution of the waste disposal problem is found. Some exotic suggestions have been made — shooting it by rocket into the sun, burying it beneath Antarctic glaciers, sealing it in trenches under the sea-floor — are rejected. Scientists at the Livermore Laboratory in California believe the material could be safely buried in mined cavities miles underground; others say it would be better to inter it in salt formations beneath the earth's crust.

The AEC's Pittman confesses that he is simply "hoping" that scientists will come up with a permanent disposal system by the end of the century. "The final disposal place must be one that isn't dependent on human actions," he said a conference on nuclear energy in Las Vegas recently. "Society is not that stable."

Another scientist remarked that no matter where the lethal material is interred, "I can write a scenario in which something stumbles on it." We cannot guess, he went on, how our earth will be in 1,000 years, let alone 20,000 — which is the length of time plutonium will have to be contained.

"It may be tragically short-sighted of the AEC to assume a solution will be found sometime in the future," scientist Terry Lash, of the National Resources Defense Council, a Californian conservation group, told the conference. "The federal bureaucracy's work in this field is deficient and inadequate."

The AEC calls such talk alarmist. "Technically speaking, it would be safe to store this material in Central Park," says a spokesman. "But people have a poor understanding of nuclear power. It's better to have it out here for public relations reasons."

The wilderness known as Jackass Flats is dominated by a huge concrete structure called the E-Mad (for Engine Maintenance Assembly and Disassembly) building. It cost $5 million to build and equip, and it was here that nuclear-powered rockets were developed to carry astronauts to Mars. That program is dead and gone, and in the E-Mad building today, technicians are recovering uranium-235 fuel from rocket cores.

Visitors can watch the process being carried out by mechanical hands and arms, through a five-foot thick window.

'Scare Talk' Hit

If the AEC has its way and the Flats become the nation's nuclear garbage dump, the E-Mad building would be the receiving centre and a processing plant for wastes from power stations all over the country. They would be stored in 10-foot-long steel casks imbedded within concrete columns eight feet wide and nearly 18 feet high.

What would happen if disaster hit the E-Mad plant — a severe earthquake or a terrorist's bomb? No one can be sure. But Dr. John Gofman, University of California Professor of Physics, has estimated that if such a catastrophe were to release one percent of the radioactive inventory at a similar plant at Barnwell, South Carolina, it could lead to damages of about $10 billion, the permanent poisoning of more than 30,000 square miles of land, and "the most massive civilian dislocation and suffering in peacetime history." AEC experts discount Gofman's statements as "scare talk" and say the plant is perfectly safe.

Nevadans, it appears, believe the AEC. Governor Mike O'Callaghan wants the disposal site at Jackson Flats. So do the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce, the Las Vegas Mayor and Council and other groups. It would mean hundreds of new jobs, millions of dollars in construction work, a big boost to the state's economy. Besides, it's only "temporary." The AEC will take away its nuclear Pandora's box, eventually. Won't it?

Britain Plays 'Question and Answer'

By JAMES EAYRS

"Do you think that the United Kingdom should stay in the European Community?"

Such is the question — so the British people learned last week — that will be "put to them in a nation-wide referendum, probably in June."

They are to answer "Yes" or "No." If more people answer "No" than "Yes," the British government is pledged to take Britain out of the Common Market.

This procedure has self-appointed guardians of the British constitution up in arms.

Some of the guardians' arguments deployed in defence of its purity are more telling than others.

The feeblest — feeblest in intellectual terms, it's power to sway could be formidable — is the "No referendum, please, we're British" line. A "strange, foreign device," huffs The Observer. "Quite out of keeping with British political procedures and practices," sniffs The Times.

Not quite, actually. In 1948 Britain organized and ran a referendum. The issue was the same as today's. A people was asked to say whether they wanted to seek their future in an independent state or in association with another political entity. True, the people thus consulted were the people of Newfoundland, not the people of the United Kingdom. But the British government which ruled them allowed them to choose for themselves.

Admittedly this is the exception to a rule that makes the referendum traditionally an un-British activity. But to rest the case against it there is like arguing whether guillotine or the gibbet is best for executions without raising the issue of capital punishment; like arguing whether a sovereign should ride in a coach or on a bicycle without questioning the institution of monarchy.

His experience were repeated in millions of families across the country, the astounding rise in real purchasing power would surely end the recession. As for his offspring, the costs of maintaining them in unemployment at home would be trifling compared with what he is paying colleges to make the government's unemployment statistics look good. A few jeans and tennis shoes, a jump in the grocery budget, a new mattress for the attic, higher phonograph repair bills — really nothing at all compared with those tuition cheques.

His student offspring might object. By denying them college, is he not denying them the visa to the good life? Not necessarily. The president's economic projections suggest that good-life-type jobs will be so few for so long that students will have to continue well past the PhD to qualify for one of the rare openings. By then they may be 35 to 40 and so far advanced in arteriosclerosis, failing wind and dim sight that the good life will be impossible at any salary.

The government will object that the country would not only lose trained minds for the future, but also suffer an embarrassing rise in its unemployment statistics. In the long run, however, the economic revival stimulated by infusions into the marketplace of the billions now being funneled into fruitless diploma production would probably create enough new income for the ambitious to finance their own mental improvement.

As for keeping the unemployment statistics down, it makes no sense at all for college students' bankrollers. For them, higher unemployment is the road to prosperity.

besides being un-British, the referendum is said to be unparliamentary. "The principle of parliamentary democracy is not intended to relieve governments and legislatures from the obligation of deciding public questions," a constitutional authority declares, "but only to make them accountable to the people for their decisions. It is the business of the rulers to rule."

Even if our hypothetical John Bull or Britannia is the most upright and diligent of citizens — committing to memory the White Papers setting out the pros and cons, reading the works of the 150 British economists who have given it as their professional opinion that Britain will be worse off economically if she leaves the Common Market, as well as the works of the 150 British economists who have given it as their professional opinion that Britain will be better off if she leaves — even after all that homework has been done is it right that one vote, however educated, should dictate the result? What a foolish kingdom to so enthrone arithmetic.

Nor is that all. The counting of votes nationally pays no heed to how voters may be cast regionally. Britain may vote overall for staying in when most Scots and Welshmen want to get out. There are several ways of avoiding the danger of too narrow a mandate for such fundamental change. A two-thirds majority, for one. A follow-up poll as in the 1948 Newfoundland referendum if the first comes too close for comfort, for a second. Majority concurrence in England, Scotland, Wales, Cornwall and Northern Ireland, as well as an overall national majority, for a third.

What of unfairness in the wording? Is the question loaded? Is it easier to say "No" to the project of a Common Market, with its plebeian connotations of mutts and bolts and groceries, its reminder that in the voter's pocketbook is what it's all about, than to say "No" to the more exalted concept of a European Community?

If the referendum leaves the British people divided and discontented at its outcome, the referendum will be blamed. But the fault lies not in the method, it lies in the way the method has been applied. Harold Wilson's leadership continues to be flawed by being too clever by half.

gymnasiums were to chuck it all and go job hunting.

The result would be double-digit unemployment to accompany our double-digit inflation. Statistically, then, college is good for the economy. But . . .

Was it Mark Twain who observed that there are lies; damned lies and statistics? In any case, statistical reality can differ widely from human reality.

A friend of mine, to illustrate, has three children in college. It is costing him some $15,000 this year. (Yes, they are good colleges, although not absolutely white-shoe top drawer.) In effect, he is paying $15,000 per annum to hold unemployment down to 8 percent.

In the statistical reality, which is the only reality they deal with in Washington, this is good for the economy. In the human reality, which this poor college-ridden devil must deal with every time he goes to the butcher, he would be infinitely better off with a higher unemployment rate.

To keep the labor pool properly sorted, the rules were changed. Four years of college was no longer enough. Graduate school was added. We had the age of the MA, a degree once so despised by scholars that none worth his footnotes would admit to possessing one, and we had the age of the 28-year-old "kid," bearded like an Assyrian and muscled like a linebacker, home from college to muse upon his PhD orals.

The 1970s have brought another radical change. Where once college existed to grade and sort out the labor pool, like cattle runs at the packing house, college is now a reservoir for keeping labor off a glutted market.

To federal economists a college student these days is a heroic figure helping to keep unemployment down. The president's vision of 8 percent unemployment until 1977 would be even nastier if the millions now in seminars and

AD PURE 'PROPAGANDA'

A provincial government newspaper ad describing the virtues of the new B.C. budget has been termed pure propaganda by a Liberal MLA.

Gordon Gibson (L—North Vancouver—Capilano) said the government should be ashamed of itself for using public funds to place full-page ads in several B.C. newspapers.

The ad, which appeared in the Times Tuesday, said the NDP's new $3.2 billion budget "has been designed to achieve greater economic equality and social justice in B.C."

It goes on to quote parts of the new budget and invites people to write for copies of the document.

"I find it absolutely outrageous," said Gibson, "that the government is using public funds for their propaganda purposes."

To be fair, he said, the government must now give the opposition parties a full page to rebut the NDP version of the truth.

Indians Reassured On Freeze

Native Indian representatives received assurance from the provincial government Tuesday that freeze on further development in the province's cut-off lands will continue.

The freeze adopted 18 months ago is designed to halt development on about 18,000 acres of unalienated cut-off lands.

The assurance was given during a meeting between cabinet ministers and representatives of the B.C. Union of Indian Chiefs.

Union spokesman George Watts, a member of the committee on cut-off lands and chief of the Sheshaht Reserve near Port Alberni, said the meeting was a positive step in negotiations over the future of the lands.

The freeze, he said, was the delegation's top priority. Further requests include that lands be given back to the reserves and in cases where development had taken place, "we ask equal acreage" be transferred to the reserves.

If both of those alternatives are not feasible, said Watts, a cash settlement is wanted.

Human Resources Minister Norm Levi, who scheduled the meeting at the request of the union, said the discussions will be considered by cabinet and there has been no major reassessment of provincial government policy.

He said native Indian representatives were advised that the majority of their concerns were under jurisdiction of the federal government.

Representatives were told they should put pressure on the federal government to outline exact realm of provincial and federal jurisdiction on the matter.

Levi said information has indicated provincial responsibility was limited mainly to development of social policies for native Indians in B.C.

Indians want compensation for the 36,000 acres which they claim were put to other uses between 1913 and 1916 although the acres had been designated as Indian lands in 1860.

Last meeting with the government was in February when union representatives said the province's offer to assist financially if Indians took their case to the court was "like asking the black people in South Africa to take their case to court."

"The courts of B.C. its laws are not for Indian people, but for white people."

The delegation will meet with the province's chiefs and report back to the provincial government, said Watts.

McMath to Head Taxation Commission

A former Richmond alderman and NDP candidate will be chairman of the B.C. Taxation Commission, formally announced Tuesday by Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer.

Robert MacMath will head the eight-member group assigned to study the whole question of real property taxation in the province.

The decision to hold a full-scale inquiry into property taxation came out of an all-party legislative committee which last year recommended delay in implementation of 100 per cent property assessments until the issue of property taxes was fully studied.

Lorimer said he did not know how long the committee's work will last but said the inequities in real property taxation are "a jungle."

The specific terms of reference for the committee may be expanded but will include discussion of the philosophy of property taxation, the distribution of taxation between classes of properties, the difference between rural and urban tax loads, taxation of Crown corporations and machinery taxes.

Asked across the floor of the house if he could make the committee's final report public, Lorimer replied: "I don't know, I haven't read it yet."

More people may be appointed to the committee later, said the minister but now the group includes:

—University of B.C. Professor Robert Clarke, who Lorimer described as a card-carrying Conservative who also worked on an Ontario taxation study

—UBC Professor Stan Hamilton

—Vancouver housewife Alice MacKenzie

Prince George businessman Bruno Meyers

—Syd Thompson, president of International Woodworkers of America local 217 president

—Ross Marks, 100-Mile House mayor and past president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

The committee will not have the power to subpoena people but will hold public hearings.

Chronic Care Cost $100M?

An intermediate or chronic care program for B.C. would cost the provincial government $100 million, Health Minister Dennis Cooke told the legislature Tuesday.

Cooke said he sympathized with Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace's concern about government funding of chronic care in the province but said the Tory leader's estimate of $25 million in costs is too low.

Wallace earlier berated the government for not acting on its long-standing promise to finance intermediate or chronic care patients the same way as acute and extended care patients.

A system cannot be developed overnight, said Cooke, and the government has only been in office for 2½ years.

More EEC Talks For PM in Italy

ROME (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived today on a six-day Italian visit, three days of which will consist of talks in the capital with another three spent skiing in the Italian Alps.

Trudeau arrived from Bonn to continue his search for a possible Canadian-European Economic Community (EEC) agreement and to discuss general international subjects.

He has already elicited tacit approval of greater trade links between Canada and the community from Holland and West Germany.

The prime minister was greeted at nearby Ciampino airport by Luigi Granelli, Italy's undersecretary of state, he left immediately for the official residence of Prime Minister Aldo Moro for an official luncheon.

Moro was not at the airport as originally planned. Officials said the Italian prime minister was arriving in Rome from Saudi Arabia at about the same time as Trudeau's armed forces aircraft landed here.

The Saudi Arabian visit was part of Italy's search for secure fuel supplies. This country imports about 90 per cent of its energy.

The international energy situation is likely to be among the subjects discussed with Trudeau who was involved in energy discussions during his trips to Holland and West Germany.

Included in Trudeau's itinerary for Rome, the third stop on his 16-day European tour, is an audience Friday with the Pope.

A Vatican statement said there are no major problems pending between the Vatican and Canada.

The prime minister was greeted at nearby Ciampino airport by Luigi Granelli, Italy's undersecretary of state, he left immediately for the official residence of Prime Minister Aldo Moro for an official luncheon.

Moro was not at the airport as originally planned. Officials said the Italian prime minister was arriving in Rome from Saudi Arabia at about the same time as Trudeau's armed forces aircraft landed here.

The Saudi Arabian visit was part of Italy's search for secure fuel supplies. This country imports about 90 per cent of its energy.

The international energy situation is likely to be among the subjects discussed with Trudeau who was involved in energy discussions during his trips to Holland and West Germany.

Included in Trudeau's itinerary for Rome, the third stop on his 16-day European tour, is an audience Friday with the Pope.

A Vatican statement said there are no major problems pending between the Vatican and Canada.

He has already elicited tacit approval of greater trade links between Canada and the community from Holland and West Germany.

HE TEACHES 'ART FORM'

Master Gets His Kicks

By HOY-VIN DER
Times Staff

Neither age nor language is an impediment to Kung-Fu master Wong Sheung.

At 51, Wong looks more like a man in his late thirties because of a vigorous fitness routine he maintains to perform the ancient martial art.

The Hong Kong native is up at five every morning — but that's a soft touch compared to his life in the Crown colony.

"I used to get up at 3 a.m. there," he said in an interview. "Now, I suppose I'm getting old."

Wong explained that Kung-Fu is not simply an art of self-defence, as many believe. He says it is a daily physical and mental exercise with the goal of "uniting the mind and body as one."

Only if one is attacked is the martial art used for self-defence, and even then, it is used only to disarm the attacker and never to kill.

He feels an integral part of Kung-Fu is a philosophy which encompasses compassion for mankind, truthfulness and modesty.

Wong emigrated to Canada six months ago.

In Hong Kong, he operated a Kung-Fu school. He also taught in China before the communist takeover.

He hopes to start a school in Victoria.

Wong, who speaks only Chinese, believes the art bypasses all language barriers.

"Like music and painting,

it is an international art," he says.

He quotes an ancient Chinese saying: "Say hoi je noy ga heng dy," meaning "We are all brothers within the four seas."

"My father taught me the art as a child ... he learned from the Buddhist monks of Shau Lin Temple, where the art was developed thousands of years ago."

The temple is copied in Kung-Fu television and movie productions, which Wong feels are "quite good."

Wong says it takes about three years of continuous practice just to learn the fundamentals of Kung-Fu. The foundation is the horse stand.

"If your horse stand is poor, you will never excel in the art."

"As a child, my father had me do the horse stand for hours on end, utilizing all muscles from the feet, through the legs, thighs, waist and shoulders."

Reflexes must also be developed. The first stage is to go outdoors each morning and fix one's eyes at the rising sun.

"Also, during the night, one breathes stale air. This is expelled with the fresh air of the morning and the mind and body is ready for a new day."

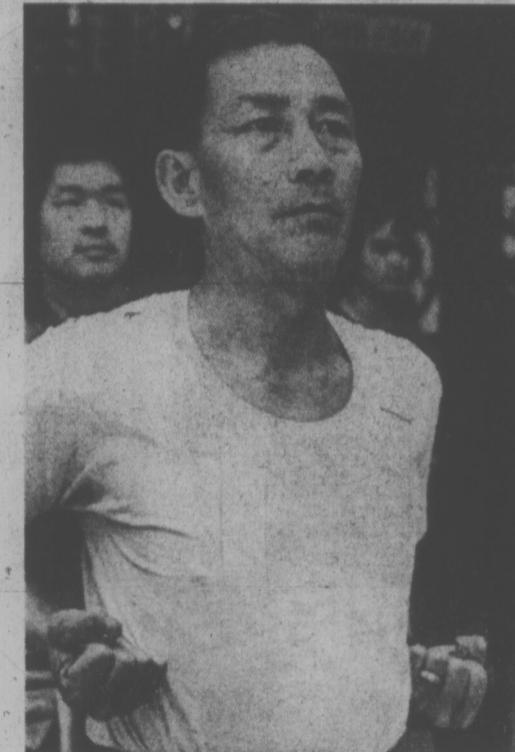

Next, eye muscle exercises are done. The eye must be trained to follow moving images while the head remains still.

Wong says that through many years of training, one should be able to follow with the eyes a mouse darting across a darkened room.

Wong is instructing 25 Chinese males between the ages of 11 and 35. When his school is established, he also hopes to teach non-Chinese — including women.

To be dedicated to learning the art, all students must spend at least three two-hour sessions at the studio, but six days a week attendance is preferable.

New Escape Chute Tested for Ferries

Evacuation drills aboard ships of the B.C. Ferries fleet could change radically if an exercise aboard the Queen of Saanich Thursday morning is successful.

Officials of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada Ltd. will be aboard to demonstrate a rubber evacuation chute.

Also aboard will be ministry of transport and other government department officials, who will evaluate the equipment, which operates in a manner similar to blow-type noisemakers used at New Year's Eve parties.

The lifeboats will be lowered, using davits, in the usual manner. Then the chute will be propelled into position and tested for quick passenger evacuation.

B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher said today there was "nothing wild" about the chute evacuation system.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you please complete "The time has come," the walrus said ... and give its source? —L.J.P.

A. It is a verse from chapter four of "Through the Looking-Glass" by Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, better known as Lewis Carroll, author of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland." The verse goes as follows:

"The time has come," the Walrus said,

"To talk of many things:

Of shoes — and ships — and sealing-wax —

Of cabbages — and kings —

And why the sea is boiling hot —

And whether pigs have wings."

A ministry of transport official said if Thursday's test is successful, he is confident the chute evacuation equipment will be approved.

Gallagher said, because the test was "an in-house test," the media would not be allowed to view the demonstration.

"We will be discussing and debating technical matters that could be misinterpreted," Gallagher said.

Voyage to a Foreign Land ... B.C.

Legislation often has a way of backfiring.

I mean, things might go along smoothly in their own way. But once you tell people that this or that MUST happen, then you get their backs up.

Bilingualism and women's rights have got a few backs up lately. They're not related, of course, but let's take a brief look at them, both, anyway.

It was brought up in New Zealand and learned (then quickly forgot) French in a land about as far away as you can get from France, and so I have never understood this bilingualism hassle. But then I'm not the only one.

Since the federal government in its wisdom decreed that French is to be one of Canada's two official languages and pressured civil servants to become bilingual, the outcries have been loud.

Letters to the editor complain bitterly of the $200 million being earmarked for the country's bilingualism program in the next fiscal year; of the foolishness of sending older civil servants, to crash courses in French; and even of the "irritation of having to turn every can and package in the market around to see what in hell it contains."

I spoke to Dr. Elaine Limbrick, head of the French Department at the University of Victoria, and she agreed with readers who feel it is a waste of time to make adults take crash courses.

Past a certain age it's almost impossible to become bilingual," Dr. Limbrick said. "The federal government is starting at the wrong end and should instead be encouraging young children to learn French."

The middle of these arguments over what they're spending the money on to make Canada more bilingual, it seems kind of sad to open a letter from a Grade 12 student named Denis, who lives in Quebec City.

Before going on to university, Denis wants to spend a year in an English city. He once visited Victoria and found it quite a few women aren't happy about it.

Recently, Laura Sabia, chairperson (see, I got that bit right) of the Ontario Status of Women Council, called International Women's Year "a lot of damned nonsense."

He writes that he speaks in French and also in English ("with mistakes," not bilingual) and would like to know if he needs any kind of PER.

The United Nations stuck its neck out and declared 1975 International Women's Year — and quite a few women aren't happy about it.

He writes that he speaks in French and also in English ("with mistakes," not bilingual) and would like to know if he needs any kind of PER.

MITS to work here. To him, it's a voyage to a foreign land. That's sad.

It seems almost unbelievable Victoria's Canada Manpower manager Stan Purdy said when I showed him the letter.

He said Denis could get information on jobs available here by going to a Manpower office in the east.

"When we are approached here about jobs over there we can get on the Telex and ask them what there is and what's coming up and we can get an answer back in 24 hours," Purdy explained.

The writer didn't like the final verse in the famous poem "If" which reads: "If you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run, yours is the earth and everything that's in it, and — which is more — you'll be a Man, my child!"

But Norrie doesn't mind cashing in on it.

"At the same time, it does make a good vehicle, and I intend to use it," she says.

"Because of letters from groups like ours," says Norrie, Canada's women will use the "vehicle" in a different way to what was originally planned.

Four giant regional conferences, each costing $1 million, have been scrapped and B.C. will spend its share of the money sending two women through the province in a van giving audio-visual exhibitions.

And a big mid-summer display is planned for the museum in Victoria.

Quite a few letters recently about women's rights and us chauvinists, but one in particular tickled me.

The writer didn't like the final verse in the famous poem "If" which reads: "If you can fill the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run, yours is the earth and everything that's in it, and — which is more — you'll be a Man, my child!"

Well, that takes care of Rud.

Beaver-Elk L. in Trouble Biologist Warns Saanich

By PAT DUFOUR

Times Staff

Beaver and Elk Lakes are in trouble, says a biologist in a report on Saanich waterways given Saanich council this week.

J. W. Langford of Victoria, commissioned by council to make the $3,000 study, movement of both fry and adult fish in and out of the lake.

He called for a ban on power boats on Beaver Lake and suggested their use of Elk

Lake should be examined.

He also advocated increasing recreation facilities at Beaver only if domestic sewage is removed from the drainage basin.

Langford recommends an aquatic sanctuary be established from Beaver-Elk

Lake to Quicks' Bottom and from Goward and Viaduct Creeks to Quicks' Bottom as a top priority.

Langford said domestic and irrigation use of Beaver-Elk Lake water should be reduced if coho and cutthroat trout runs are to continue. He said the dam at Beaver should be redesigned to allow free quality in the two areas, which are the principal spawning and rearing areas of the Quilcuit.

"Residential pressure should be minimized," he warned, "and development should be heavily restricted."

He said Quicks' Bottom (the flat area south of Markham leading to Glendale Lodge Hospital) was one of the most "sensitive" areas in Saanich.

He said the sanctuary should provide protection for semi-aquatic mammals, aquatic birds and fish species.

"Quicks' Bottom is of considerable ecological significance for each of these categories," he said.

"This aquatic conservancy area should be given first priority for aquatic habitat protection," he stressed.

Langford emphasised preservation of coho and sea-run cutthroat trout depends on keeping high environmental movement of both fry and adult fish in and out of the lake.

He called for a ban on power boats on Beaver Lake and suggested their use of Elk Lake should be examined. He also advocated increasing recreation facilities at Beaver only if domestic sewage is removed from the drainage basin.

Langford recommended joint planning by council to prevent overdevelopment in all three species.

"Upstream migration of trout and salmon is greatly impeded throughout this section by debris at fences and at the exit from Quicks' Bottom," he said. "Free access through this area to the spawning grounds is necessary."

He cautioned: "Maintenance of adequate water flows and habitat improvement planning should be designated as the first objectives of this aquatic conservancy area."

Saanich's parks department has been acquiring acreage in the area with a view to moving the Lambriek Park nursery from Quicks' Bottom.

A municipal official, however, said the nursery would be established on higher ground than that being considered for an aquatic sanctuary.

Langford suggested negotia-

Island Finals Set and So Are the Bays

LARRY DALZIEL
Oak Bay hopefulFORREST PARTINGTON leads Vic High

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH

Times Staff

Don Horwood has some bad news for the seven other coaches whose teams will compete in the Island high school boys' basketball tournament at UVic's McKinnon Building.

The news? His Oak Bay Bays are getting better.

"We've played our best basketball of the season in the last two or three weeks and I think we're just starting to reach our potential," said Horwood Tuesday.

What causes concern is that the Bays have been ranked in the B.C. coaches' top 10 poll throughout the season and they haven't lost a league or playoff game yet. They won their divisional title and took the Greater Victoria High School boys' League championship last Saturday by beating Mt. Douglas Rams 73-52 in the final of the Island tournament.

And when they play Belmont Braves in the opening round of the three-day event Thursday, they'll be after their third straight Island championship.

Bays, also seeking an unprecedented third consecutive provincial title, will have two strong candidates for the Times Trophy for the Island tournament's outstanding player in Larry Dalziel and Steve Pescod.

The 6'7" Dalziel was runner-up to Reynolds' Greg McInnis for the scoring champion in the Greater Victoria league, while Pescod is an excellent rebounder and scorer.

Braves haven't been a model of consistency this season but they are an explosive club with Bruce English and Bruce Robertson.

In other first-round games Thursday, Alberni Chieftains meet Vic High Totems, Cowichan Thunderbirds take on the Rams and Courtenay Townes tangle with Spectrum.

Only three teams will advance to the provincial tournament to be held March 19-22 in Vancouver.

The three-team up-Island contingent to the tournament is rated one of the strongest in recent years. The Townes are led by Dave Lee, the Thunderbirds by Andy Reilly and the Chieftains, who have improved greatly since the start of the season, by 6'5" centre Chris Charleson.

Totems, who took second in Division "B" of the Greater Victoria League behind the Bays, have been ranked much of the season in the coaches' top 10. With Rick Pyatt (6'4") and Forrest Partington (6'7"), the Totems have size to go along with the good shooting of Tim Lampard and Richard Griffin.

The biggest surprise in the Greater Victoria League this season has been Spectrum. Last year as Mount View, the team lost all 14 of its league games. This season behind new coach Rick Mark, the club posted a 7-6 mark. Gord Gummer and Roy Girath provide good scoring punch.

Rams won Division "A" but they'll probably be without the services of their fine centre John McManaman, out with a broken nose. With Bob Spanier and Tom Watson, however, they still possess a potent offence.

Action starts Thursday at 4:10 p.m. with the Chieftains and the Totems meeting in the first game.

Hockey: A Discrepancy In NHL Playoff System

The way it works in the National Hockey League playoff structure this season, the top three teams in each of the four divisions will advance to the Stanley Cup post-season playoffs. Theoretically, these are the top 12, but this year it may not be so. Because it is extremely likely, even probable, that one of the top 12, or even from the top 8, won't make it. And further, that club may have a better record than a championship team in another division.

It's true, because if the final decision had to be determined today (Tuesday) Atlanta, which ranks 11th in the overall point standings, would be out, and St. Louis which is 13th, would be in. And with Atlanta having a five-point bulge on the club at this writing, it would hardly seem decent, would it?

But that's the way the puck slithers in the NHL, and really, it isn't too far fetched to suggest that Atlanta, or the New York Islanders, who are engaged in a tremendous battle for the final playoff spot in the Patrick Division, whichever finishes last, could have more points than the winner of the Smythe Division.

Think not? Well, get out your handy pocket calculators kiddies and hearken to this. Right now, Atlanta has 65 points, only five behind the Islanders who are eighth overall and if that isn't too difficult a margin to overcome, then look into that other division, the Smythe.

Leading the pack there are the struggling Vancouver Canucks with 68 points, just one more than the favored Chicago Black Hawks, who have 67, and both these clubs trail the Islanders in the overall standings.

Wanted: A 'Wild Card'

So, if Atlanta, say, could get three wins while the others lose, and then all other things remain equal to the end of the regular season, a team with a better point record than a divisional champion wouldn't be around at playoff time, and besides, the team it surpassed in overall performance would even have a first-round bye. And believe it or not, but the ostracized club could actually finish as high as eighth overall.

All of which means there is a discrepancy in the playoff structure, or why couldn't the NHL adopt a saving feature called the "wild card"? In this way a club would be rewarded for its performance and not be a victim of the luck of the draw.

Obviously this wasn't figured when the new structure was devised, and the possibility was deemed unlikely too. Or what is the usual NHL answer? "If we had a chance to do it over again, we might have reacted differently." That's been the recent stock phrase regarding expansion and the escalated player salaries of the last few years ago in the face of the challenge from the World Hockey Association. And it could happen again as any figure fibber worth his genius can figure.

Meanwhile, in the divisional races, there are two clear leaders. In the others the race is as close as the next minute. Buffalo has a 12-point bulge on the reluctant Boston Bruins in the Adams, while Philadelphia only recently managed to build up a 10-point spread over the Rangers in the Patrick. The Sabres appear as if they may hang on, but there's the nagging thought the Rangers may be ready to peak for the playoff drive and the Flyers may not be certain of first place.

Canucks in a Crisis

Montreal Canadiens, despite having a tremendous road record and a new mark for games without a loss away from form home, still haven't managed to pull away from the pesky Los Angeles Kings. The Kings are that good that, if every team was in the same division they would rank No. 3 and only five points out of first place. So that fight could go right down to the wire. And the Kings may have a built-in edge because they have 11 of their last 18 games on Forum ice.

Highest of all races, however, is the Smythe. The Canucks, now at the end of an eight-game road trip, have only a bare working margin over Chicago Black Hawks, as noted earlier, and third-place St. Louis is sitting in the wings, just eight points back, waiting for either, or both, to falter.

Which is the main reason Vancouver manager-coach Phil Maloney asked if he could please opt out of his scheduled dinner date here for the Sportsmen's. It's just that he feels he should remain with his club for a very important workout prior to the Tuesday (March 11) game against Kansas City. If those two points may appear relatively easy, Maloney wants to make sure. And who can blame him?

But his is still a minor issue compared to what could happen in Atlanta, or in the Islanders' camp. Imagine! A team that could top a whole division no, even in the playdowns! Theoretically that is. And if you up to wager it won't happen, use your money, not mine.

Who's Shaving Whom in Baseball

By The Associated Press
Today's lesson in business administration comes to you courtesy of Ken Holtzman, Bill Russell and Bill Campbell.

As it happens, Holtzman majored in business at the University of Illinois before turning to pitching major league baseballs for Chicago Cubs and later Oakland A's.

In his years with Oakland and owner Charles O. Finley, Holtzman's business schooling has continued with almost yearly salary squabbles, and the left-hander isn't sure he can stand that type of education much longer.

If a business opportunity I have works and everything is conducive to leaving at mid-season, I'd quit baseball then," the 29-year-old Holtzman said Tuesday.

If the general condition of the economy were better, I probably wouldn't be here right now," he added at Oakland's Mesa, Ariz., training base.

"I'd like to let him (Finley) go out and find another 19-game winner."

Considering the fact that Finley already has lost a certain 24-game winner named Catfish Hunter, the fiery A's owner may not be pleased with the prospect. But a good businessman never tips his hand.

Russell, the Los Angeles

Dodgers shortstop, got his business education while holding out for $75,000 this season. He signed his contract Monday for less money than he had wanted—but admitted no feelings of malice for club vice-president Al Campanis, who did the negotiating.

When it was over, Russell said: "Campanis and I shook hands, knowing business is business."

But all businesses have their eccentricities. Minnesota Twins hurler Campbell found that out.

Twins' owner Calvin Griffith offered another side of the story. "In any business, the board of directors sets the rules and if the people want to work for that company they follow the policy."

"We're no different," Griffith said.

The 26-year-old right-hander, Minnesota's top reliever last season with an 8-7 record and a 2.63 earned-run average, appeared despondent with the loss.

"I am disappointed," he said at the Twins' training base in Orlando, Fla. "But the ball club's policy says I can't have the beard, and this is one of those times when you can't fight city hall."

Griffith offered another side of the story. "In any business, the board of directors sets the rules and if the people want to work for that company they follow the policy."

"We're no different," Griffith said.

ROW BOILING AT AINTREE

LONDON (AP) — The future of the off-again, on-again Grand National steeplechase is as difficult to figure as the winner of the world's toughest jumping horse race.

"Aintree gets the all clear," and "National is safe for three years," were two of the headlines Tuesday night in the long history of disarray of the race scheduled to be run over Aintree's course April 5.

Bill Davies, new owner of Aintree, was embroiled in the latest row with officialdom over his plan to run a $250,000 Aintree Derby flat race in October to rival the L'Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

The ruling British Jockey Club said it could not sanction the event without consultation with racing authorities in the United States, France and Ireland. And Davies said he would not run the National until the new race was approved.

Davies is a bearded ex-carpenter who became a multimillionaire property tycoon. He's no horse lover, but he immediately guaranteed the National for at least five years and announced big plans for development of the course.

Earlier this year, Davies said he would extend the life of the race for 20 years if his plans could be linked with an Aintree Derby.

"Unless my requirements are met I have no intention of staging the Grand National," Davies said.

Later a spokesman for Davies said the argument had been settled and the national would continue at least until 1977.

More talks between the Davies group and the Jockey Club were expected later this month.

Tourism Agency Grants Passed

Victoria city council approved grants to two tourism-promoting agencies on Tuesday, made one of the grants conditional and called on the two groups to stop their squabbling and co-ordinate their efforts.

The full $14,500 requested by the Victoria Visitors Information Centre, which caters to tourists once they have already arrived, was approved by council in caucus.

But aldermen decided to allocate initially only $5,000 of the $9,430 sought by the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau, which handles external advertising for the tourist attractions of Greater Victoria and the Island generally.

The VIPB will be told that the balance of the sum requested will be paid by the city as soon as the agency has raised a matching amount from the tourist industry itself.

Aldermen noted that the group derives most of its financial support from municipal and provincial grants, and Ald. Alf Hood said it appears that local tourist businesses contribute "not a bean" to its advertising budget.

Ald. Bob Ellis said under the VIPB's present method of financing and operation most of the cash goes toward administrative expenses, leaving "very little" for external advertising.

If council were to approve the full grant as requested, he said, it would be helping to perpetuate a bureaucracy.

Ellis, who suggested the phased funds allocation, with the second payment dependent on industry support, said he believes the Visitors Information Centre would be prepared to direct some of the money it raises from industry subscriptions toward the other agency's external advertising expenses.

Tourist businesses contributed $17,000 to the VIC budget last year and the budgeted sum for this year is $22,000.

VIPB directors recently complained they have been denied the grant which formerly was paid annually by the VIC's predecessor, the Victoria Visitors' Bureau, to assist with outside promotion.

They pointed out that the former arrangement avoided the necessity for both groups to enlist financial support from local tourist firms, in separate fund-raising drives.

Appeal Dismissed

An appeal by Daniel Nicholias Makow, 4075 Metchosin Road, against a conviction in provincial court of assaulting a policeman and obstructing a policeman

An appeal by Daniel Nicholias and obstructing a policeman was dismissed Tuesday by Judge Montague Drake in county court.

Makow was sentenced to three months in jail after being convicted Nov. 8.

Court was told the charges arose from the intervention of Colwood RCMP Const. William Biden July 21 when he found a group of eight youths drinking beer at Dunsuir School baseball ground.

Biden told the court obscenities were shouted at him and he was forced to the ground "in a pushing manner."

23 FIRMS GUILTY OF FDA OFFENCES

OTTAWA (CP) — Twenty-three firms were convicted for offences under the Food and Drugs Act and the Weights and Measures Act from October to December, 1974, the consumer affairs department reported Tuesday.

The largest fine went to Westhorne Foods Ltd. of Winnipeg which was ordered to pay $5,000 for selling meat which it said came from a whole side of beef when in fact there were pieces from a number of carcasses.

Westhorne was also convicted of short-weighting meat and was fined $500.

The department said the convictions resulted from 38 charges made during the period under various federal acts involving consumer fraud, product safety, and weights and measures.

HEARST GIRL ARRESTED

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Anne Randolph Hearst, (hiding face) a younger sister of fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia, has pleaded not guilty to a misdemeanor drug charge following her arrest at the U.S.-Canadian border.

Miss Hearst, 19, was arrested Tuesday at Niagara Falls, N.Y., along with one of two passengers in the car she was driving, when the trio entered the United States at the Rainbow Bridge, U.S. customs said.

U.S. Attorney Richard Arcara said that in a routine search of the car and its occupants, a customs agent found 1.2 grams of crystallized amphetamine, popularly known as "speed," in a sock worn by Donald Moffett, (right), 21, of Denver, Colo.

Both Miss Hearst and Moffett were charged with misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance.

Moffett and Miss Hearst were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Edmund Maxwell in Buffalo within four hours of their arrest. Both pleaded not guilty. Maxwell released them on a $1,000 recognizance bond each and scheduled a preliminary hearing for March 19.

Pauper's Meal Urged for Charles

OTTAWA — Royalty would be treated to a pauper's meal if city Alderman Georges Bedard had his way.

Bedard suggested the city cancel a planned $15,000 luncheon for Prince Charles when he visits here April 21 and plan instead a hunger feast of soup and crackers.

Ald. Joe Quinn termed the proposal a speech against the royal family. "It's despicable to speak against the royal family . . . we in this country are part of the British Empire."

"We should be glad to contribute to a visit by the Queen or the prince," he said. "The $15,000 amounts to a nickel apiece for each citizen."

LONDON — Shirley Temple films have been ruled unsuitable for showing to children on Britain's independent television network because they "have no relevance to modern children," a television spokesman said Tuesday. The 1930s are "more likely to appeal to the nostalgia of older people than to the sophisticated children of today," said a spokesman for the Independent Broadcasting Authority.

TORONTO — A local doctor says he fears medicine urgently needed for treatment of a sick baby may be tied up in the postal strike at Toronto International Airport. The medicine — sent 10 days ago by special-delivery air mail from Yale University in New Haven, Conn. — is not available anywhere else in North America. Dr. J. W. Balfe, a kidney specialist treating six-month-old James Bastone, said Tuesday.

CHICAGO — A thief's attempt to rob a church ended with a thud Tuesday when he was overpowered by a nun. Police said the thief was attempting to flee with a bag containing $3,000 when he was tackled by Sister Ann Ruby, 30.

VANCOUVER — Provincial government advertising directed at consumers is inflammatory instead of informative, says Ralph Davis of Toronto, chairman of the association of Canadian advertisers. Ads which say that being a good consumer is a matter of self-defence imply that "business is out to get you," a bad stance for the government, to take, Davis said.

TORONTO — The Royal Alexandra Theatre was closed Tuesday night for the first time in 12 years after actor Yul Brynner called three hours before a performance was scheduled to say he was unable to go on stage because of a tendon injury.

Guest Conductor Here

Guest conductor Juan Matteucci brings a reputation developed outstandingly in the southern hemisphere when he comes to the Victoria Symphony podium next weekend.

He will conduct concerts Sunday and Monday at the Royal Theatre in a program consisting of Wagner, Mozart and Tchaikovsky. He will also conduct the concerts of March 23 and 24.

Matteucci has been for 10 years, conductor of the New Zealand Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra in Auckland. During that time he has also made guest appearances with orchestras throughout South America and in the United States.

Following up the New Zealand post, Matteucci had been conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra of Chile, having been appointed upon its formation.

In his decade there his natural endowments, training and dedication developed the Chilean Philharmonic into what became noted as one of the best orchestras in Latin America.

Matteucci was born in Faenza, Italy, to a family in which for eight generations the eldest sons were cellists.

Following the tradition the child studied with his father and made his first public appearance as a soloist at the age of eight.

Growing up in Chile, he completed his studies at the Conservatory of Santiago. At the same time he was following advanced studies in mathematics and medicine as one of the youngest students at the University of Chile.

A Chilean government scholarship took him back to Italy where he studied conducting at Milan under Antonio Guarneri and Carlo Marie Giulini.

For his first concert pair with Victoria Symphony, Matteucci will perform the Meistersinger overture by Wagner, and Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra K. 622 and the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony.

Soloist with the orchestra in the Mozart work will be the orchestra's own principal clarinet, Timothy Paradise.

FAST ACTION SOUGHT OF BORDER ISSUES

OTTAWA (CP) — A former Liberal cabinet minister has joined other authorities in calling for settlement of U.S.-Canadian boundary disputes off the coasts.

John Davis, fisheries and environment minister until he was defeated in the 1973 election, said settlements are needed on the east, west and north coasts.

Davis appeared before the Senate foreign affairs committee which is considering United States-Canada relations.

Davis said settlement of the western boundary is necessary before co-operative pollution control measures can be completed.

He noted that the manner in which the Alaska-Yukon border is extended into the Beaufort Sea will determine the ownership of some oil and gas.

The former minister said the boundaries should be extended far out to sea, past even the 200-mile limit of proposed Canadian control, he said.

Clemency Demands Hit Senate Snag

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Martial Asselin (PC-Quebec) questioned the legality Tuesday of a bill that would restrict the right of the cabinet to commute death sentences.

He said the bill, introduced by Senator Louis Robichaud (L-New Brunswick), covers only one of the two Criminal code sections mentioning the cabinet's so-called Royal prerogative of mercy.

Both sections probably should be changed by the bill, he told the Senate.

Senator Sarto Fournier (L-Quebec) said commutation is an important counterbalance to "judicial error" — death sentences imposed as a result of mistakes by the courts.

There are cases where evidence proving the innocence of a condemned man comes to light after he has been sentenced to death, he said.

The power of commutation could be invaluable in such instances.

The bill, awaiting second reading, would prevent the cabinet from commuting sentences to life imprisonment in cases where mercy is not recommended by a judge or at least one juror.

TAX BILL IN SENATE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate began work on the government's huge-income tax bill Tuesday night, but it likely will be a couple of weeks before most Canadians begin getting tax refunds.

Figures provided by Revenue Minister Ron Basford show the government had received 787,892 income tax returns to the end of last week, down from 816,491 at the same time last year.

A total of 321,486 had been processed at this time last year, whereas only 122,572 have been processed so far this year. A further 106,728 are waiting for passage of the proposed tax legislation.

Total refunds so far are $23.65 million, well down from the comparable $35.04 million in 1974.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Stanley Korchinski took a sharp stab at broadcasting Tuesday night in the Commons, condemning what he called the smut and violence on television.

The Progressive Conservative MP for the mainly rural Saskatchewan riding of Mackenzie gestured angrily throughout his speech and his voice was hoarse with emotion as he called for the government to clean up TV.

Korchinski was armed with a bill that would set up the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC), which would replace the existing Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC), broadcasting's regulatory agency.

The new organization also would assume responsibilities held by other government groups, such as the transport commission, which approves Bell Canada Telephone rate changes.

Korchinski said the government, because most television viewers are concentrated in the densely-populated urban regions, treat rural viewers as second-class citizens.

But the main thrust of his criticism was against a "little group" of television executives who, he said, by not censoring themselves, can undo the guidance of parents and undermine the few government controls that are imposed on broadcast content.

Korchinski, a farmer from Invermay, Sask., said he is not suggesting government censorship; he just wanted good taste to prevail — and not necessarily the tastes of urban TV viewers.

Each province should have a representative on the CRTC to protect cultural and educational interests, he added.

Senators Smiling Over TV

OTTAWA (CP) — Television coverage came to a parliamentary committee for the first time in Canadian history Tuesday and the senators involved seemed pleased.

"Up to now I'm not disappointed," said Senator Carl Goldenberg.

Goldenberg, chairman of the committee where the film cameras from three television networks were admitted on an experimental basis, said he found "no undue disturbance"

of the proceedings.

Senator J. Harper Prowse

(L-Alberta) said: "Sometimes we tend to be a little irrelevant with a wisecrack or something to some other senator. Well, you don't do that when you're on TV."

The new senate legal and constitutional affairs committee was holding hearings on a bill to reduce penalties for possession of marijuana and hashish.

After watching the late news on CBC and CTV television networks Tuesday, Goldenberg said he felt both were fair presentations and served as "a good beginning for our experiment."

His only disappointment was that the CBC French network had shown nothing of the film it had taken at the afternoon session of the committee at which "two of the briefs we've received" were presented in French, he said.

Pet Food Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should consider regulating the nutritional quality of pet foods "for the protection of the consumers of these products," the Senate was told Tuesday.

The recommendation was contained in a report tabled by Senator Hazen Argue (L-Saskatchewan) chairman of the Senate agriculture committee.

The report said that during the committee's study of the Feeds Act amendment, it was brought to the committee's attention that there are no required nutritional standards for pet food in Canada and that these products can contain dead or diseased animals . . . and other nutrients in non-digestible form.

"These products are only required to be correctly packed, labelled, weighed and to be free of bacteria."

The report said that gross pet food sales last year totalled more than $120 million.

"Pet owners are spending considerable sums on products, the nutritional quality of which your committee believes to be irregular."

The question of whether dogs and cats should be defined as livestock for the pur-

raised by witnesses appearing before the agriculture com-

More Oil Sand Leases?

MACDONALD

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to obtain additional leases in the Alberta oil sands, giving it room to build more oil extraction plants if they prove feasible, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

The government hoped to negotiate a share of an additional 150,000 acres of the oil sands within the next year, the minister told the Commons natural resources committee.

That acreage would be outside the leases already committed to the Syncrude Canada Ltd. project partly owned by Ottawa and the provinces of Alberta and Ontario.

Appearing before the committee to discuss federal investment in the consortium Macdonald said the government is willing to discuss plant construction with other groups. But he said they should not expect to get the same deal as Syncrude.

After three multinational oil companies threatened earlier this year to abandon the project, the three governments agreed to put up $800 million to keep it going. The company also was promised world prices for its oil and an exemption from tougher resource taxes imposed last fall.

If Syncrude is successful, government energy department officials say it would have a minimum production of 100,000 to 150,000 barrels

The energy minister said the additional production plants probably will be needed within the next 10 years, but he could not say when they will be built.

The important thing now is to get the plant we already have moving.

"Profits will be $8 billion, of which Ottawa will get $2.5 billion for its $300-million investment."

A finance department official appearing with the minister said $1.8 billion will flow to the federal treasury as taxes, leaving federal share of anticipated profits at $700 million.

No breakdown was given for revenue of the other governments involved.

When the project ran in trouble in January, Ottawa agreed to invest $300 million, Alberta $200 million and Ontario $100 million. Alberta also agreed to lend the oil companies an additional $200 million to increase their investment.

The three oil companies Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and Canada-Cities Service Ltd. — increased their investment in the $2-billion project to $1.4 billion.

The oil companies threatened to pull out of the project after learning that costs had doubled to $2 billion over one year and that one of the partners, Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd., Arcan was getting out of the consortium. Arcan held a 30-per-cent

Macdonald said the additional lease increase in which the government hopes to negotiate a share now is held by the four original participants in the Syncrude consortium.

Railway Death Knell?

Marchand Clowns Over Scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons resembled a laugh-in Tuesday as Transport Minister Jean Marchand played comedian during some tough questioning about the Hamilton harbour dredging scandal.

At one point, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp left his seat to speak with Mr. Marchand, but it could not be determined whether he was encouraging the transport minister or telling him to cool his performance.

Opposition members say privately they are becoming increasingly frustrated with Marchand's performance in the Commons and at committees.

Marchand is known to have some type of health problem. During the last two years he has spent some long periods away from Ottawa and observers say these were for medical treatment.

First Steps Taken On Changing Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee has taken a first major step toward a revision of Parliamentary rules.

And, if the process continues, the revision could have a profound effect on the daily operation of Parliament.

Meanwhile, the first steps — of interest mainly to Hill participants — were taken Tuesday when the Commons committee on procedure and organization agreed on the principles of several changes.

One involves the daily question period — traditionally the most lively part of the day — and under the proposals it would be lengthened from the present 40 minutes to close to an hour.

The statements made to the house by ministers, such as on important announcements, reporting on trips and tabling major reports, would be shortened.

And some government spending estimates, now examined by small committees, would come back before a committee-of-the-whole in the Commons.

Concorde Cleared For U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration gave a tentative go-ahead Tuesday for British Airways and Air France to start operating the Concorde supersonic transport on scheduled flights to New York and Washington next year.

Inauguration of the proposed six flights daily would mark the first supersonic passenger air travel ever offered in the United States. It would cut in half the time required for trans-Atlantic flights on subsonic jetliners.

An FAA spokesman said the decision to grant approval for the six flights was made even though the Concorde is a relatively noisy, dirty aircraft because so few planes would have little bad effect on the environment.

The spokesman said "final approval would be withheld, however, until after a deadline for public written comment on the decision passes May 6. He said a public hearing on the subject would be held in Washington April 14.

The FAA submitted to the president's council on environmental quality an environmental impact statement backing up its decision. The proposal does not apply to the Russians' TU144, the world's only other supersonic transport.

CRTC Retreats on CBC-TV Ad Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) have reached a compromise which will give the cabinet the final say in proposals to make drastic cuts in CBC television advertising.

The CRTC is also retreating from its proposal that the CBC give more prime-time prominence to Canadian television programs. Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier and Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said Tuesday in a joint announcement.

However, the publicly-owned television and radio network will carry out plans to abolish most radio advertising by March 31 and gradually eliminate children's advertising on television by Oct. 1, the ministers said.

The compromise means that the federal cabinet, with its ultimate control over CBC spending, will decide how far the corporation should go in meeting CRTC proposals for fewer commercials on television. It was reached after lengthy three-way negotiations involving the CRTC, the CBC and the ministers.

Both CBC president Laurent Picard and CRTC chairman Pierre Juneau said in interviews they were pleased with the agreement.

"We're happy with it because it means the cabinet will review the whole thing," said Picard, who earlier protested that implementation of the CRTC proposals would deprive the CBC of revenue needed to improve program quality and replace obsolete equipment in Toronto and elsewhere.

Juneau said he was satisfied that CRTC proposals for abolition of most radio advertising and of all children's television advertising were accepted with only minor variations in timing.

The federal broadcasting regulatory body was willing to back down on requests for more prime-time Canadian television programming and to turn over to cabinet the question of reducing the number of all television commercials, he said.

In its approval last March of CBC broadcast licence renewals for another five years, the CRTC said the television network should limit commercials to a maximum of eight minutes per hour starting Oct. 1 and reduce this volume by one minute per hour annually to a level of five minutes per hour by 1978. At present CBC broadcasts about 10 minutes per hour of commercials.

Alcohol Suspect In Wreck

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian transport commission report expresses "grave concern" about evidence of alcoholic drinks found in the locomotive cab of a freight train which collided with a passenger train last Dec. 20 near Kingston, Ont., killing three persons.

Commission investigators say in the report, issued Tuesday, that broken pieces of a beer bottle and a 12-ounce vodka bottle were found in the crushed cab of the Canadian National Railways freight when it was dismantled.

The report urges that railways be required to establish "standard surveillance procedures to monitor the fitness of train employees reporting for duty."

A commission spokesman said the commission has already written CN urging the railway to carry out this recommendation.

CLC Hits Bargaining Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) struck a blow Tuesday at recent proposals to change public service legislation and suggested extending collective bargaining rights to the RCMP and parliamentary staff.

The 1.9 million-member congress said in a brief to a parliamentary committee that it was disappointed with recent recommendations by Jacob Finkelman, chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board.

The brief said the proposed changes to the Public Service

Staff Relations Act will probably "increase the frustrations and tensions on the part of workers and their bargaining agents."

This frustration would stem from prohibitions on extending collective bargaining to cover job security, pensions, job classifications, promotions and demotions; the congress said.

A joint Senate-Commons committee is studying the Finkelman report and will make some recommendations. The brief said the congress objects to a proposal that classifications and job descriptions should not be included in collective bargaining.

The CLC expressed dismay that the Finkelman report did not recommend including a technological change clause in the staff relations act.

And it attacked the proposal that the employer should have the right to designate additional employees for essential services during strikes.

Meanwhile a top CLC official reacted angrily Tuesday to comments by a Liberal MP about the influence of U.S.-controlled unions in Canada.

"It is a congress problem which we will deal with," Shirley Carr, CLC executive vice-president, told a parliamentary committee. "I'm not here to discuss that problem tonight."

Harold Herbert (L.-Vaudreuil) was asking about possible U.S. influence in Canadian politics through U.S.-controlled unions.

In a speech prepared for delivery to a University of Washington seminar on U.S.-Canada relations in Seattle, Rhodes said the province is giving away valuable gas at fire sale prices.

He said during dealings between the province and the Pacific Northwest, U.S. negotiators have used superior business acumen while B.C. has dealt as a good neighbor.

GAS GIVE-AWAY?

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. has been a good neighbor but a bad business man in its natural gas dealings with the U.S., James Rhodes, chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp., said Tuesday.

In a speech prepared for delivery to a University of Washington seminar on U.S.-Canada relations in Seattle, Rhodes said the province is giving away valuable gas at fire sale prices.

He said during dealings between the province and the Pacific Northwest, U.S. negotiators have used superior business acumen while B.C. has dealt as a good neighbor.

Warner's Knockout Body Fashions

Warner's has designed "something new in the world of body fashions". Bra and bikini sets like you've never seen before — brief and kicky as they come. Snazzy is the word for them. They have all the knockout touches like showy trim on bra and bikini and front closure on bra. Shoulder straps convert to halter-style for today's bare back fashions. They'll look so great you could almost wear them on the beach. So soft and smooth, they shape you gently, naturally — the way the body is — only a little more controlled. Made from Warner Lyra, their all-over stretch means they're super comfortable, too. They're the perfect underlining for today's slinky knits, sporty T-shirts or just about anything. But what a shame to cover them up! Wear under, or you dare, as is in navy, beige or orange. Sizes 32-34 and 36.

Time for Daffodils and Salads

March is the beginning of spring here on the coast, bringing not only Easter but daffodils and all the other early spring flowers and early green salad vegetables.

From local greenhouses and coldframes are coming fresh young lettuces, green onions, even small radishes. Add these to a stalk of bought celery and cooked frozen green peas, you have salad.

For non-salad eaters in the family camouflage is needed. This begins when you are cooking breakfast bacon. Put aside two or three crisp strips for this Supper Salad for 4. Make the sauce ahead and cool in refrigerator.

SUPPER SALAD

Sauce:
 1/4 cup soy or sunflower oil
 2 Tbsp. lemon juice and pulp
 1/2 tsp. salt
 1/2 tsp. sugar
 1 small garlic clove, whole one-eighth tsp. paprika
 1 head green lettuce, fairly solid
 4 slices Cheddar cheese
 2 slices crisp bacon, crumbled
 1 large, drained, whole canned tomato.
 Lettuce, stirring with a wooden spoon. Remove and discard garlic. Cool the sauce.

Have the lettuce ready.

Make sauce by mixing all sauce ingredients in a small saucepan. Bring to a gentle boil and simmer for 2 minutes, drained and dried in an old linen dishtowel.

Slice 4 thick slices of lettuce crosswise. Lay on serving plates. Top each with a quarter-inch-thick 3-inch square of Canadian Cheddar cheese.

Sprinkle with crumbled bacon; top with a quarter of the large canned tomato, or a whole small canned tomato.

Spoon sauce over each salad 10 minutes before serving, leaving at room temperature. Many people are put off salads because of their chill.

Serve with large homemade buns of wholeheat, warmed.

Another salad of lettuce and green onion is served with a hot dressing — truly delicious and so different that non-salad eaters succumb because it isn't cold.

APPLE DATE SALAD
 2 cups diced apples
 1/2 cup chopped dates
 2 cups grated carrot
 2 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice

1 Tbsp. chopped parsley OR chervil

4 green lettuce leaves.
 Mix all ingredients quickly with the lemon juice to prevent discoloration and vitamin loss.

Place a heap on one lettuce leaf on each serving plate; serve with plain homemade yogurt, or with the Sauce listed for the Supper Salad above, inimitating the garlic.

Finally a hot Cabbage Salad, really a Hot Slaw, fine for the cool days, with Cheddar cheese or hard-cooked eggs if these are liked.

HOT SLAW
 3 cups coarsely chopped cabbage either green or red, or mixed

1 Tbsp. soy or sunflower oil
 2 Tbsp. lemon juice and pulp
 1 Tbsp. water.

Soak the cabbage in cold water while heating oil in covered frypan or skillet. Drain cabbage and add to oil.

Cover the pan and cook gently for 9 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes to prevent sticking. Then stir in the lemon juice, water and a few grains of sugar. Stir again and serve hot.

A sandwich of wholeheat bread or bun with cheese and green onions with the Hot Slaw as a topping makes a good lunch.

If you are already a salad eater you will know that most vegetables can be enjoyed in a raw state; and any portions of leftover cooked vegetable will combine with fresh raw green salads such as winter cress and chickweed (growing now in the gardens), lettuce and green onions.

A spoonful of homemade yogurt is the ideal dressing, adding a few grains of sugar and salt for those who are not yet accustomed to its fresh clean taste.

Women Protest

JERUSALEM (AP) — Fifty Israeli women demonstrated Tuesday outside the office of Premier Yitzhak Rabin's office, opposing Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai as part of the Middle East peace plan of United States Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

SOYBEAN LOAF
 1/2 cup dried soybeans, cooked

1/4 cup dry brown rice, cooked

1/4 cup wheat flakes

1 small onion, chopped

1 large carrot, grated

1/4 cup raw peanuts, ground

1/2 cup chopped celery with leaves

1/2 tsp salt

1/2 cup canned tomato, or juice or vegetable cooking water.

Grind the soybeans with coarse cutter after soaking overnight in cold water. Drain the water first — the beans are easy to rinse before cooking and they cook much more quickly.

Cook the ground beans in a large saucepan for one hour with the brown rice, simmering gently for the hour. Add more boiling water to keep the beans and rice loose and fairly moist.

At the end of the hour, add the remaining ingredients, mix thoroughly and turn into an oiled or greased loaf pan.

Bake for 1 1/2 hours covered at 135 degrees C. (275 F.). At the same low oven temperature, bake a fruit kugel for the next day.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: HONEY LEMON LOAF

By HUGH ROSS
 (Today's reader recipe was submitted by Hugh Ross, 1443 Jamacia. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would like to share, please send it to Time Family Desk, 2621 Douglas.)

I have found honey provides quick energy and sustains it for a period of time. It's also great for cooking and, when used regularly in a diet can help diminish the desire for sweet and other more fattening snacks between meals.

(Mr. Ross is secretary of the B.C. Honey Producers Association, Capital Region Division.)

HONEY LEMON LOAF

1 cup honey
 2 eggs
 1 tsp salt
 2 cups sifted flour
 1/2 cup shortening
 1/4 cup milk
 1 tsp soda
 1/2 tsp grated lemon rind
 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
 1/2 tsp baking powder

Cream shortening, add honey slowly and continue beating. Add eggs one at a time and beat until light and creamy. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk. Fold in lemon juice and rind. Bake for about 50 minutes at 325 degrees.

Chinese Food Request

By MARY MOORE

There seems to be a rash of requests for recipes for Chinese food. I'm glad for it I enjoy making it.

I have a Sweet and Sour Pork recipe that goes together with the greatest of ease. For health's sake I used brown rice instead of white to serve it on and everybody declared it a delicious combination.

SWEET AND SOUR PORK

2 lbs. lean boneless pork (shoulder or butt or tenderloin)
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
One 19-oz. can pineapple tidbits
7 tsp. corn starch
1-3 cup brown sugar
3/4 cup hot water
1/4 cup vinegar
1 tbsp. soy sauce
1/2 cup thinly sliced green onion

Tip the pineapple tidbits into a strainer over a bowl. Reserve the juice. You need 1 cup. Cut any excess fat from the pork and put it in the frying pan to grease it then discard fat. (I used lean, fresh pork shoulder.) Cut meat into 1" cubes. Brown in frying pan with the salt and pepper for about 10 minutes stirring frequently.

In a small pot mix well the corn starch and brown sugar then stir in the hot water and reserved pineapple syrup. Cook stirring until thick. Remove from heat and add vinegar and soy sauce. Pour over browned meat. Cover and simmer over low heat 30 minutes. About half way through cooking time add the drained pineapple tidbits. About 3 minutes before serving time add the very thinly sliced green onion. Serve with rice. I used brown rice.

To prepare the brown rice soak 3/4 cup in two 1/4 cups warm water in a heavy pot 1 hour. Add 1/4 teaspoon salt and bring to boil covered. Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn heat on as low as possible for 1 hour.

As you can see if you use brown rice it must be washed well before you start preparing the meat.

Serve a mound of rice on each dinner plate and spoon Sweet and Sour Pork over. This provides plenty for four hearty eaters.

OATMEAL DATE BARS

1 cup water

2 cups (10 ounces) chopped dates

1 cup flour

1/2 cup rolled oats

3/4 cup sugar

1/4 teaspoon salt

3/4 cup margarine

Bring water to boil and add dates. Stir and cook 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. Combine flour, rolled oats, sugar and salt. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs. Lightly press half the mixture in greased 9-inch square pan. Spread filling over base. Cover with remaining rolled oats mixture. Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit until lightly browned (45 to 50 minutes). Makes about 3 dozen bars.

Massive Dose Of Vitamins Health Threat

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

By DR. JEAN MAYER

"It's a little good for you, a lot is a whole lot better." This could well be the motto of consumers of megavitamins with dosage levels at hundreds or thousands times the recommended amount.

At best, buyers of massive doses vitamins are wasting their money. At worst, in the case of overdosing themselves with vitamin D, they are playing havoc with their health. Indeed, the threat is so great, and the practice so widespread, that the U.S. Committee on Nutritional Misinformation of the Food and Nutrition Board has just issued a summary of the hazards of this fat-soluble vitamin.

Unlike all other vitamins, vitamin D is the only one whose major natural source is not food, but sunlight acting on skin. Ultraviolet rays of the sun act on a form of cholesterol in the tissues to convert it to vitamin D. (Even mothers' milk, nature's food for human infants, is low in this vitamin.)

Vitamin D is vitally needed by children (and, in later life, by the elderly) for the normal formation and nourishment of bones. If there is a shortage, bone and teeth fail to calcify and, in its extreme, vitamin D deficiency produces the childhood disease, rickets.

A hundred years ago, during the Industrial Revolution, rickets was the most common serious disease of the young in North America and northern Europe, largely because so many children worked indoors in windowless factories, or, if they were outside, because the all-pervasive air pollution and smog filtered out most of the ultraviolet light of the sun. Even as recently as the early 1930s, 90 per cent of the children in London's poorest district, East End, had evidence of rickets. And in Baltimore, in the same decade, one-third of the children were found to have the disease. Yet within a few years, once dairies began to fortify milk with vitamin D, rickets, for all intents and purposes, was wiped out in the U.S. (Unfortunately, it is now reappearing in some infants whose parents, perhaps from an exaggerated avoidance of "unnatural" vitamins, will not feed them either fortified milk or a vitamin supplement.)

With the conquest of rickets, some enthusiastic parents apparently decided that if some vitamin D was good, more would be better. The result: hypercalcemia, which is marked by an accumulation of an excessive amount of calcium in soft tissues, especially the kidneys. When the recommended amount of 400 International Units of vitamin D a day was established, this disease subsided.

The effects of such over-doses of vitamin D are not confined to children. Adults, particularly elderly people on low incomes whose diet is apt to be deficient in a number of vitamins, develop osteomalacia, a rickets-like demineralization and softening of the skeleton bone, on intakes of less than 100 I.U. a day. At the other extreme, adults taking 2,000, or five times the daily recommended 400 I.U., will suffer from weakness, lassitude, lack of appetite and constipation. Unless the intake is reduced, death will eventually follow.

Clearly, vitamin D should neither be neglected nor swallowed over-enthusiastically. The rules of safety are clear: — Infants who are breast-fed should have a vitamin D supplement, under a pediatrician's direction. — Cows' milk and infant foods should be fortified to provide up to 400 I.U. per day. The rest of us should be able to get our 400 I.U. from the sun and from fortified milk, egg yolks and fish, such as salmon, tuna, sardines and herring.

— People with diseases affecting vitamin D absorption or metabolism may need more, but such needs should be specifically recommended and supervised by a physician.

'Purist' Slob

DEAR ABBY: The wife who said her husband smelled because he seldom bathed, reminds me of a story they tell about Samuel Johnson, the noted English lexicographer of the 1700s.

Johnson was a "purist" where words were concerned, but when it came to his personal hygiene, he was a notorious slob.

A woman passenger sitting next to him on a coach train said: "Sir, you smell!" Whereupon Johnson replied: "Madam, you are wrong. YOU smell, I stink."

Perhaps the husband who was accused of "smelling" would like to show this to his wife. — A.C.H.

DEAR A.C.H.: Samuel Johnson was wrong. If he gave off an offensive odor, he "smelled" and stank as well. Or should's Shakespeare's immortal line in Romeo and Juliet have been: "A rose by any other name would 'stink' as sweet!"

DEAR ABBY: I am a nurse, working in the emergency room of a general hospital. Please tell people to put their phone numbers on the back of their car registrations or their driver's licenses.

You have no idea how difficult it can be to find a patient's phone number in a hurry when we need permission for treating someone who is unconscious, or who is a minor.

What a tremendous service you would perform if you'd print this. — R.N.

Versatility, From Bisque To Bouillon

Try as you may, you'll have a tough time finding a more versatile food than soups. That's saying a lot, but just look at all the ways soups can go, plain or fancy.

A soup is any liquid in which solid foods such as meat, poultry, cereal, vegetables or fruits are cooked. Soups can be classified into three groups:

Thin, clear soups:

—Bouillon — a broth made by simmering meat, fish or vegetable, in water to extract their flavors, and then strained to keep just the liquid.

—Broth — a term used interchangeably with bouillon; is sparkling clear and free of all floating particles.

Light, delicate soups: bisques, thin cream soups or cheese soups.

—Bisque — a rich cream soup generally made with vegetables or shellfish.

Hearty, thick soups: meat or fish soups, chowders, and thick cream soups.

—Chowder — a hearty soup that was originally made with fish, vegetables and milk, but that now uses practically any meat, poultry or fish in a variety of liquids.

Bouillon or consommé are refreshing, hot or cold and low in calories. As an appetizer or first course, serve small portions of a light cream soup, broth or fruit soup. For a change of pace for lunch or a light supper, try a hearty soup with a salad and dessert.

Getting a soup together can be an interesting experience. Almost everything in the refrigerator can go into it. For liquids, try seasoned tomato juice, chicken broth, beef stock or liquid from canned vegetables. The list of vegetables is endless — tomatoes, carrots, celery, parsley, rutabaga, peas, mushrooms, corn or cabbage. Since different soup ingredients have different cooking times, the trick is to add the quick-cooking ingredients at the end, so that everything is done at the same time. Use this guide as an indication for cooking times for several soup ingredients, simmering in a covered pot.

Soup bones — 2 to 3 hours. Raw 1-inch beef, lamb or pork cubes — 1 to 1½ hours.

Whole vegetables or large vegetable pieces — 45 minutes.

Sliced vegetables or small vegetable pieces — 30 minutes. Vegetables when shape is important — 10 minutes (mushroom slices, zucchini slices).

Canned or cooked vegetables — heat 'til soup returns to a simmer.

Cheese — add at end of cooking period and stir until melted.

Heat thoroughly but "don't boil."

Seasonings are also very important for successful soup making. The longer soup is held, the more flavors intensify. Be careful not to over-season your soup at the beginning. You can always add more just before serving. Seasonings that are used regularly in soups include: salt, freshly ground pepper, paprika, celery seed, bay leaf, garlic, thyme, allspice, dill, chives and dry mustard.

Getting a soup together can be an interesting experience. Almost everything in the refrigerator can go into it. For

Q: Vitamin E capsules are expensive. Why have they become so popular and why do we need this Vitamin?

A: The main function of Vitamin E in the body is as an anti-oxidant which prevents the deterioration of certain substances, such as Vitamin A, that are important for the proper function of body tissues. Vitamin E capsules, which often contain wheat germ oil, have become popular because they have been promoted as a cure for: cancer, diabetes, ulcers, acne, infertility, allergy, and heart disease. These claims are unsubstantiated. Nutritionists do not advocate taking Vitamin E capsules as a diet supplement since you obtain the vitamin in many foods you normally eat. Thus, a Vitamin E deficiency is rarely seen.

Q: Are old or new potatoes the best buy?

A: Considering cost, old potatoes are certainly a better buy than the new ones. Regarding food value though, remember that their Vitamin C content decreases during storage. Potatoes used after they are recently dug have 26 mg. of Vitamin C per cup. After three months storage the vitamin content drops to 12 mg. per cup and after six months to 8 mg per cup.

A: How can I lower my family's fat intake at meals without a drastic change in our present food costs and our normal eating pattern?

A: You can lower the fat content of your diet without major changes in cost by following these simple hints:

— Try skinned milk or buttermilk instead of whole milk; choose skim milk cheeses instead of whole milk cheeses.

— Switch to diet or whipped margarines which have less fat on a volume basis than other margarines.

— Use only half the amount of dressing or try low calorie dressing for salads.

Mandarin Shrimp Served With Sauce

1/4 26 oz. pkg. Chinese mixed vegetables (fresh)

1 4 1/2 oz. small shrimp, rinsed, drained

1 tsp. salt

1/2 tsp. pepper

Mandarin Sauce (blow)

Stir fry vegetables in 1 tbsp. hot oil for 5 minutes. Add salt, pepper, sweet basil and 1 tbsp. water; cover for 5 minutes, add shrimp and half the sauce carefully to prevent breaking up and serve hot over steamed rice. Save the rest off the sauce for serving hot over fillets or perch another day.

SWEET AND SOUR MANDARIN SAUCE

1 tin mandarin oranges

1/4 cup frozen orange juice concentrate

1-3 cup red wine vinegar

3 tbsp. brown sugar

2 tbsp. corn starch

1/2 tsp. ground ginger

1 tbsp. fresh orange rind (or 1 tsp. orange rind concentrate)

Drain mandarin oranges, reserving liquid. In sauce pan combine liquid, orange juice concentrate, vinegar and brown sugar. Heat over medium heat until you have a clear liquid. Soften corn starch and add to liquid with ginger and rind. Continue cooking until clear. Add mandarin orange segments carefully as segments are very tender.

The "normal" play of this deal would be to put up dummy's Jack or ten of spades on the opening lead. When the card played would win the trick, the Jack of hearts would be led and the finesse taken. It would lose to West's king.

West would now perceive the fullness of continuing spades, since South would be known to possess the ace and king; and by a process of elimination, West would probably win.

Nicolson to Bare Contract

Times News Services

BURNABY — Lorne Nicolson, British Columbia housing minister, said Tuesday he will table in the legislature a contract through which the provincial government is purchasing the Casa Loma motel-apartment development here.

Nicolson gave the pledge after making his first on-site inspection of the project.

His surprise visit came in the wake of three weeks of opposition probing into the financial details of the deal, in which the government has agreed to pay $3,177,500 for the development. The government plans to run it as a senior citizens' facility.

Opposition criticism intensified when it was disclosed last Saturday that the full cost to the government will, in fact, be $351,000 more than the government had said, or a total of $3,528,000.

In the legislature, Liberal Leader David Anderson outlined Tuesday another "discrepancy" in Nicolson's statements about the government's purchase of Casa Loma.

Anderson took issue with a statement by Nicolson Monday that $218,000 over the announced $3.18 million purchase price would be used for interest on advances until the federal government's 90-per cent payment is received in June.

"It was an attempt to conceal the facts," said Anderson adding that maximum interest that could be charged leaves $184,300 "unaccounted for."

"And I think it's time this house indicated displeasure at this sort of misleading information."

Outside the house the Liberal leader called for an independent investigation of the whole matter of the Casa Loma purchase.

Anderson argued that the statements constitute a case of contempt and Speaker Gordon Dowding said he will rule on the matter at a later date.

Monday, Nicolson confirmed that the initially-announced purchase price of $3,177 million for the complex — scheduled to house senior citizens — did not include an additional $351,000 for administration costs to Dunhill Development Corp., modifications and interest on advances.

Gov't Agency Probe Urged by Law Group

The Law Reform Commission of B.C. has recommended that a special inquiry be conducted into procedures used by government agencies in reaching decisions affecting personal and property rights of individuals.

In a report tabled in the legislature Monday, the commission says the present law, probably for a mixture of historical and political reasons, is imprecise and illogical.

The report says the com-

NDP ROLE REVERSAL

Roles were reversed during question period Tuesday in an unprecedented action by an NDP cabinet minister who stood during question period and aimed a question at the opposition benches.

Although question period is usually taken up with opposition members questioning government policy, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley jumped to his feet to zero in on the opposition leader Bill Bennett.

He asked for clarification on a statement made by the Socred leader in which Bennett said: "We all know the tale of the $30,000 cabinet table."

Alien Owner Ban Sought Sparks Fly on Challenge Of ICBC Fire Policies

Comox NDP MLA Karen Sanford has again called for a ban on foreign ownership of land in B.C. and says recent statistics show a significant amount of land is being bought by foreigners.

Sanford said in the legislature Tuesday that first three months of statistics on transfers of land to foreigners are proof enough the government must take action.

Amendments to the Land Registry Act, proclaimed last August, require citizenship declarations in all transfers of land in the province.

Figures from the period Aug. 1 to Oct. 31 show that 3.5 per cent of 1,511 out of 43,413 declarations related to foreign citizens.

Gordon Dowding to withdraw his remarks.

McClelland said ICBC shouldn't necessarily adopt the same attitudes of private insurers who refuse to insure high risks.

But he said McClelland indulges in innuendo and smear.

Frankly, any question from that member I don't believe," Strachan said.

He was ordered by Speaker to see that it complies with Canada shipping standards while the government is considering its purchase.

"I think so, but I'll have to check on that," he told the house.

He was replying to a question from Saanich and The Islands MP Hugh Curtis.

Asked if he could assure that there will be a Victoria-Seattle ferry run during the summer, Strachan said: "I can't give that assurance."

He said the whole question of ferries on that run is "being examined."

A-G Demurs On Drink Inquiry

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old inmate of Wilkinson Road was sentenced in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre for six months definite and one year indeterminate, to be served concurrent with a previous sentence for a drug related offence.

Trevor Patrick Clanton pleaded guilty Feb. 24 to breaking and entering and theft at the Sidney school board office Oct. 2.

A dictation unit, cassette recorder and calculator were taken. Total value of the goods is estimated at $450.

Judge William Ostler said he thought it best that Clanton serve a more constructive sentence as "there is no point in sitting around at Wilkinson Road." He recommended Clanton take some educational courses at the correctional centre.

Gary Warren Labrecque, 17, of 1754 Lee, charged with breaking and entering and theft, was given a suspended sentence, placed on one year probation and ordered to attend Metchosin Camp when directed by the probation officer.

Police alleged he was involved in a break-in at the Royal Jubilee Hospital between Feb. 7 and Feb. 10, during which time equipment valued at about $400 was taken from the radiotherapy section.

Labrecque told police he had "stood in the alley while the deed was committed," police said.

Defence lawyer Mike Hutchison said it was "not a planned crime."

"It was a spontaneous stupid thing to do and the accused is remorseful," said Hutchison.

"Nonetheless, it is a serious offence and one all too prevalent in this community," Ostler said.

A 17-year-old boy, who pleaded guilty Feb. 13 to stealing a car Jan. 20 from the parking lot of Mayfair bowling lanes, Saanich, received six months definite and six months indeterminate, to be served at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

by George Youson of 247 Hampton, at Swartz Bay and left the island. He was picked up by Vancouver police Jan. 21.

Defence recommended group home supervision for Coombs but prosecutor Peter Birkett felt custody would be more appropriate "because the offence was committed while the accused was on bail for a previous charge."

Ostler said a group home environment "would not be the answer for a boy who at 17 claims to be an alcoholic . . . what he really needs is care and counselling."

He recommended that Coomb's sentence be served at Bowler Bay Camp.

Former Victorian Arthur Charles Burgess was dismissed when a preliminary hearing on a charge of trafficking in narcotics failed to get by the basic issue of identity.

Burgess, 23, was freed after two police witnesses failed to pick him out in the spectators' section, where the judge allowed him to sit at the request of defence lawyer Peter Klassen.

Burgess had been charged with selling one cube of hashish to an RCMP undercover officer in Victoria Sept. 29, 1970.

Two women were sentenced after pleading guilty to shoplifting.

Jasper-Kaur Beadall, 24, of 521 Dupplin, was fined $200 for stealing $100.80 worth of goods from Zeller's, 1610 Hillside, on Nov. 21.

Margaret Mary Tremblay, 53, of 104 Kuper, who took two birthday cards from Colwood Pharmacy, 1910 Sooke Road, received a suspended sentence.

"It was a spontaneous stupid thing to do and the accused is remorseful," said Hutchison.

APOLOGY FOR SHOW

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — The Saskatchewan education department has apologized to the local school board for recommending the CBC-TV production of Ten Lost Years as educational for students, a local school board spokesman said Tuesday.

Prior to the broadcast, the department told school boards it would provide "an excellent opportunity for students to learn about the Depression years."

Portions of the show contained profane language and the production was criticized by some parents and school boards. A copy of the letter of apology was tabled at the local school board meeting.

Manitoba Throne Speech Rapped

WINNIPEG (CP) — The leaders of Manitoba's two opposition parties criticized the NDP government Tuesday for the relatively few concrete proposals contained in the throne speech.

Progressive Conservative leader Sidney Spivak called the speech "unimpressive and barren" and said it had little to say about inflation or the many other problems facing Manitobans.

"Realistically, it shows that the energy crisis has hit the NDP," he said.

Newly-elected Liberal leader Charles Husband described the speech as a "regurgitation" of past NDP programs and no substitute for a meaningful legislative program.

Spivak, leader of the official opposition in the house, was wary of a government proposal for a major urban renewal program in Winnipeg. He was also critical of another proposal to change the function of the Manitoba Development Corp.

He questioned whether Winnipeg residents would be consulted about major public works projects to be built in their neighborhoods.

On a proposal to change the MDC from a lender of last resort, Spivak said the NDP misused the Crown agency in order to get involved in business.

He said the proposed change highlights the NDP's own mismanagement and can not camouflage the many business failures of the MDC in recent years.

Husband also had reservations about the new role proposed for the MDC and said he was particularly concerned at the possibility of the Crown agency competing with chartered banks for loan accounts.

Agency Slow To Pay Up

SASKATOON (CP) — The 215 teachers and 70 teacher aides and janitors working in northern Saskatchewan may not receive their next paycheques unless the Indian Affairs Department comes up with the $749,000 it owes the Northern School Board.

A spokesman for the board today said the debt incurred by the federal department's Prince Albert and North Battleford/district offices constitutes unpaid tuition fees for treaty Indian students attending provincially-financed schools in northern Saskatchewan. The debt was due Dec. 31, 1974.

The board has not received payment despite repeated promises from the department, the spokesman said.

The board has a $330,000-a-month payroll and salaries for staff in January and February were paid with a $500,000 loan from the provincial treasury.

EDMONTON (CP) — The environment conservation authority was told Tuesday a chemical is being developed to prevent growth of foliage without resultant browning of brush.

A spokesman for Du Pont of Canada Ltd. told a hearing into the use of biocides and pesticides foliage turns brown and dies when sprayed with existing chemicals, while research now is under way to develop a means of controlling unwanted growth without offending the eye of passers-by.

'Normal' Life, With Care

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

Consulting attorney Bruce Rollick of Vancouver testified in B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria today that it will cost $1,144,580 to provide special care for 18-year-old Corrine Ronda Lissell if she lives to 68.

If she lives for 30 years, said Rollick, the cost would be $893,755.

Rollick said the life expecttancy of a person her age is about 57.62 more years.

Dr. A. H. Ibrahim, a specialist in neurosurgery who treated Corrine after she suffered paralysis in both legs and left arm in a traffic accident 2½ years ago between Courtenay and Comox, said "with the facilities we have now it shouldn't diminish her life expectancy by more than 10 per cent."

Corrine was 15 when she was thrown from a motorcycle driven by David Cox which was in an accident with a car driven by Henry Paul on the road between Courtenay and Comox June 13, 1972.

Through her father Robert, she is seeking liability and damages.

Dr. Ibrahim concurred in "practically everything" recommended in a report by Don Vaux, a rehabilitation counsellor for the Canadian Paraplegic Association.

Vaux told Mr. Justice James Macdonald and a jury Corrine is "very, very limited physically."

Suitable rental accommodation is "very scarce" and a suitable home would cost $65,000 to $80,000 plus $20,000 additional expenses as well as $10,000 for furniture.

He outlined a long list of other requirements for lifelong care. Recurring monthly expenses including personal care would come to more than $1,000.

He described Corrine as "well motivated and intelligent" but it is "very unrealistic that she could be self-supporting on a permanent basis because of her limitations."

Dr. Ibrahim said the girl suffered several broken ribs, facial cuts and fractures in addition to the paralysis of both legs and left arm.

He was satisfied there would be "no further recovery."

He added that "I don't think she'll ever be independent. She'll always need help because of the paralysis to the left arm. She'll have to be seen regularly by physicians, frequent examination of urine to spot early infections."

She would also have to guard against chest complications such as the risk of bronchial pneumonia and gastrointestinal problems.

Dr. Lawrence Brunton, a specialist in physical medicine and rehabilitation who works mainly at the G. F. Strong Rehabilitation Centre in Vancouver, said "I wouldn't expect any further improvement. Any change would be in the nature of deterioration."

He didn't think it would be practical for her to live alone.

With optimum care she should live a normal life span or close to it, he said.

The girl's family doctor, Dr. George Power, said she was in "excellent general health" before the accident.

"She is back at school, doing very well. Her motivation is top notch," he said.

But, he added, she will "have to have some kind of continuing care all her life." Given "careful care" she can have a normal life expectancy.

Mrs. Audrey Lissell took the witness stand and said her daughter was "just about a straight A student" at school before the accident who liked sports including skiing. She has been living at home since December, 1973, after treatment at Royal Jubilee, Gorge Road and G. F. Strong.

The family house has had to be modified to make it better for Corrine, including widening nearly all doors to allow a wheelchair through, enlarging the washroom, and installing bars over a bed to make transfer from the wheelchair easier.

Cox was overtaking three vehicles bound for Comox.

Cox, completing his testimony Tuesday, agreed he said at his earlier examination for discovery that he didn't have a clear vision of the three vehicles.

This was wrong, he said. Asked when he changed his mind, he said after he read his answers. "I was thoroughly confused," he said.

He reiterated his speed estimate of 45 miles an hour while passing. As the car turned left he went into a skid, realized he couldn't stop, swerved to the left and then the right and "dumped" the motorcycle on its side.

She said she hopes to complete Grade 12 this June.

Court was told earlier that Cox was making a left-hand turn into a driveway from the Courtenay-Comox road while

FINGERPRINT OPINION MIXED

"The way I see it, it's a method of identifying people who are, in effect, working in the U.S."

Such people are now required to supply a photograph to U.S. Customs officials and submit to fingerprinting which would be cleared through the Canadian police data centre in Toronto.

"I really can't share that concern," Jack Thomas, Victoria manager of Vancouver Island Coach Lines said in an interview this morning.

He said the regulation, introduced about three weeks ago, was part of a new security system laid down by the U.S. federal government.

"Quite frankly, you either adhere to the law or you have a problem," he said.

He interpreted the new regulation as applying to all people who frequently cross the border . . . "even salesmen."

However one Coach Lines driver has been quoted as saying he found the regulations offensive and an infringement on his rights.

"I wouldn't care to comment on that aspect," Thomas said.

Communities Set Planning Night

What about sewers and storm drains, transit services and shopping centres for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin?

Where should new housing go and what kind should it be? What about parks, playgrounds and recreation facilities?

These are the sort of questions involved in the future of the so-called "western community" the electoral areas of Metchosin, Langford and Colwood.

And the first "general information" meeting for residents there, sponsored by the local planning and zoning committee of the Capital Regional Board, will be held next week.

It will be at 7:30 p.m.

March 13, in the lunch room at Belmont-Fisher secondary school, 3067 Jacklin.

The meeting will tell residents how the planning process will proceed and what role they can have, regional planner Peter Hammer said today.

Regional directors and planners want to indicate the scope of questions to be resolved and at what point residents can contribute, through workshops, briefs and meetings.

Planning will consider things like land uses and services, developments of areas and neighborhoods, said Hammer, "all the elements that constitute a community."

He said there will be strong emphasis on the relationship between urban development and the environment, particularly in areas like the Highlands where the environment in some locations is fragile.

Another subject will be protection of coastal areas.

The planning committee includes regional directors for the area, Ken Rainey for Metchosin, Earl Pallister for Langford and Dick Emery for Colwood, as well as Jim Campbell, chairman of the regional board.

They'll Push Plan For Botanical Park

The Greater Victoria Environmental Centre hasn't given up hope of establishing a botanical park on the grounds of Royal Roads military college.

Defence Minister James Richardson last week turned down the proposal, but GVEC director John Priestman thinks it is only a matter of time before the botanical garden proposal will be approved.

"We made a thorough study and such a good case for establishing a botanical park at Royal Roads that I think it will eventually be approved," he said. "But we might have to wait for a change of government."

A botanical park would not interfere with the activities of Royal Roads, Priestman said.

Richardson in a letter to GVEC said it would not be practicable to extend the usage of Royal Roads to the "degree contemplated and proposed in your study."

But he added his department would continue to preserve the area in its natural state.

CIA File Maze Bared

Last Body From Tube

LONDON (AP) — Recovery crews removed the mutilated body of the engineer from his crushed driver's cab during the night, bringing the final death toll in London's worst subway disaster to 41, London Transport officials said.

Fifteen other bodies were moved from the train earlier Tuesday.

Eighty passengers were injured, five of them seriously. Forensic experts began examining the body of Leslie Newson, 55, who was driving the train. One theory was that he suffered a heart attack.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Director William Colby of the Central Intelligence Agency today unfolded a bewildering array of ways American citizens got into intelligence files — often without their knowledge — over the past 27 years.

Colby denied reports of massive domestic spying.

"There is no way of knowing how many names of U.S. citizens" are in various files because of cross indexing and other procedures, he said in testimony prepared for a house committee headed by Rep. Bella Abzug, (Dem-N.Y.)

One biographic collection on foreign personalities alone, he said, contains "several million" names, including some who are U.S. citizens.

He spoke, Sens. Frank Church, (Dem-Idaho) and John Tower, (Rep-Tex.) were to meet with President Ford to discuss their committee to investigate intelligence agencies, which holds its first formal session later today.

Issued in the agency that would not maintain files on American "citizens" except for purposes such as "foreign intelligence," "employment and that it would avoid "blacklists of any sort."

Colby said it was "entirely proper" for the CIA to try to find possible foreign links to American dissident and anti-war groups in connection with intelligence and counterintelligence operations.

"By the very nature of its activity, CIA must record certain names of individuals who do not know they are being recorded," he said.

"I believe that some of the material which was collected by CIA over the past 27 years may not be appropriate today" although undertaken within what was believed to be the agency's authority.

The labyrinth included:

The main "positive intelligence biographic collection" containing alphabetically filed information on "several million foreign political, military, scientific, economic, technical and cultural personalities. The names of some U.S. citizens or permanent resident aliens appear in this collection — we do not know how many."

Another biographic collection based on data collected abroad and from other U.S. agencies which "serves as the primary foreign counterintelligence index of the U.S. of persons of intelligence interest."

...entirely proper

Two city aldermen disagreed Tuesday on whether a townhouse complex can be built in Victoria West without requiring the demolition of a heritage home already on the site.

Ald. Murray Glazier argued it couldn't be done, while Ald. Sam Bawlf kept insisting it could.

also rejected complaints by Glazier that the Heritage Advisory Committee's tardy plea for preservation of the old building — Muirhead House, at 527 Esquimalt Road — could impede plans for the 25-unit townhouse development.

"We have an industry that accuses us of red tape, being slow and getting off the track" with processing housing proposals, he said. "This developer came to the APC in November yet this is March and we are still exploring principles."

The developer's first submission for a 62-unit scheme was turned down by the APC but a scaled-down submission for 25 units received the commission's recommendation for rezoning approval earlier this year.

City council has instructed its solicitor to prepare the necessary bylaw which will be presented at a public hearing.

Rather than delay that procedure, council agreed in caucus Tuesday to approach the firm to inquire whether preservation of Muirhead House can be reconciled with its development plans, both from the technical and economic points of view.

Gov't Zoning Control Threat

The provincial government may move to exert control over municipal planning and zoning if certain local governments continue to block new housing developments, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said "three or four" municipalities have been blocking or purposely delaying applications for new housing developments to prevent huge influxes of people into their areas.

Some municipalities charge developers impose fees, said Lorimer, which are meant to compensate for increased services necessitated by new housing areas.

But in some cases the extra fees have not been directly related to costs caused by the new developments and the fees have been a heavy burden for developers, he said.

Hundreds of developments have been affected in this way, he said, but most municipalities are not involved.

Lorimer pointed out that Ontario has legislation which gives the government some form of final control over municipal zoning and planning decision and warned that B.C. may have to take that route.

He said it might not have to be applied in a blanket way but could be applied only to those municipalities which are blocking developments.

Asked outside the house if this could be termed a veiled threat to local governments to shape up, Lorimer said it was more like an "unveiled threat."

Lorimer would not name the municipalities involved.

Mines Deputy Named

Hart Horn, the former executive assistant to Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, has been appointed an associate deputy within the mines department.

Nimsick said in an interview Tuesday his department has been reorganized into three branches with Horn as associate deputy of the newest branch, operations.

Dr. J. T. Fyles will continue as associate deputy in charge of mines, John Lincham as associate deputy in charge of petroleum resources and John McMynn will continue as a full deputy in charge of all three branches.

Horn, 38, was originally hired by the NDP soon after it came to office to serve as Nimsick's executive assistant, a job usually considered a political appointment.

In November, 1973, Horn resigned as executive assistant and took over a civil service job as director of the revenue branch in charge of collecting mineral royalties.

In his new role, Horn will be in charge of operations, said Nimsick, which will include administration, economic development and revenues.

As director of revenues, Horn earned between $20,000 and $23,000 and Nimsick said the new job will pay a different salary but it has not been determined yet.

Horn has a masters degree in economics from the University of Calgary.

$70,200 ROLLS A SELL-OUT

LONDON (UPI) — Rolls-Royce came out with its latest model today, a two-door luxury car that costs $70,200 including tax — and already is sold out for at least a year.

Sight unseen, 120 persons from the Shah of Iran to anonymous U.S. businessmen have filed orders for the carpeted, air-conditioned, stereo-equipped, leather-upholstered, walnut-panelled, 17-foot Camargue.

The automobile, named for a region of southern France, will get 14 miles to the gallon.

Each car takes six months to assemble. Production at first is at the rate of one a week, later to go to two a week, meaning it will be at least a year before the first wave of orders are filled.

The company reckons the first Camargues could fetch nearly $100,000 on the automotive black market.

The Camargue is the result of three years of secret designing, research and testing. It is of Italian design, with the 17-foot body of soft aluminum done in Britain. The radio and quadraphone stereo is from West Germany.

With a 6,750-cc aluminum alloy V-8 engine, automatic transmission, fully independent suspension, power steering and disc brakes, the Camargue can reach 120 miles an hour.

Rolls said it contains more engineering and electronic sophistication than has been packed into any other car. It is said to "think" for itself, even tightening the passengers' seat belts on tight turns.

The walnut paneling is from trees hand-picked in Italy. The upholstery is from a special herd of Rolls-Royce cattle kept behind electronic fences and not barbed wire so as not to mar the hide.

"You must not look upon a Rolls-Royce as a car, as a collection of metal and brilliant ideas," company official Evan Morgans said. "It's a dream."

Wider Harbor Probe

OTTAWA (UPI) — The RCMP has broadened its investigation into harbor dredging contracts beyond Hamilton, Ont., and Quebec City, solicitor-general Warren Allmond said Tuesday.

It would hamper the police investigations into price-fixing of contracts if he was to divulge where the probes were taking place, he added.

Three persons have been convicted and two others are awaiting trial on a variety of charges, including fraud, as a result of the police investigation into irregularities at the Hamilton harbor.

Allmond said the police probe in Hamilton led to the investigation at Quebec City since some of the dredging companies working in Hamilton were involved also in companies working in Hamilton.

Companies involved in dredging work at Ile d'Orleans near Quebec City.

"And now there's been evidence that leads them (RCMP) to suspect some malfeasance in other places," he said.

"These suspicions could prove negative or positive. But because there is certain evidence that there might be something wrong, they are investigating."

The U.S. carrier Okinawa with helicopters and 1,500 marines aboard has been ordered into the Gulf of Thailand as a precaution to evacuate Americans from the besieged Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh if necessary, Pentagon sources said today.

As a last resort, the marines would go in to secure the airport at Phnom Penh, to allow evacuation of civilians by military transport, the sources said.

Contingency planning for the evacuation of some 400 to 500 Americans still in Phnom Penh called for a four-step operation, according to the situation, they added.

Air evacuation by commercial or chartered aircraft.

Use of military transport if Communist activity becomes too dangerous for civil craft.

Marine helicopters from the Okinawa which could approach to within 75-100 air miles from Phnom Penh.

The barrage did not slow the U.S. airlift of rice, ammunition and gasoline. Commercial planes chartered by the U.S. military took off and landed at the rate of one every eight minutes.

One plane was hit by rocket shrapnel and sustained minor damage, but flew back to Saigon safely.

Military officers said five persons were killed and at least five wounded in attacks on the airport.

The last commercial flight into the airport today was an Air Cambodge twin-engine jet Caravelle.

Passengers aboard the plane said they saw two rocket bursts from the air while the plane circled to land and another burst as they filed into the heavily sandbagged aircraft.

In a related Washington development, the State Department says that when Congress cut off the bombing of Cambodia in 1973, it "aborted" a promising effort by Henry Kissinger to negotiate a peace settlement.

Spokesman Robert Anderson was not specific Tuesday in his public response to a request for new diplomatic efforts from a congressional group which visited Indochina last week.

He said Kissinger tried continually in the past two years to get peace in Cambodia.

MOUNTIES TAKE OVER ABOARD THE ANSWER

Times News Services

Some of the 23 crew members were airlifted from the Answer to a Canadian Forces base on Prince Edward Island.

The takeover apparently ended the ship's dash for freedom which began when Erb and his crew sailed it out of Quebec City Feb. 23.

"I feel pretty sure in saying we're pretty determined to stay aboard her this time," one RCMP official said.

Hydro Eyes Terminal Site

B.C. Hydro is negotiating to purchase property on the east side of Douglas Street, across from its Garibaldi Road bus garage, in what appears to be the first move toward establishment of a downtown transit terminal.

Hydro and transit bureau officials confirmed today that the property in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel-Topaz block is being acquired, but declined to say for what specific purpose it will be used.

However, a spokesman in the office of Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said it is intended to relocate to that site the provincially-owned Vancouver Island Coach Lines bus garage, which now occupies property leased from Canadian Pacific at Douglas and Belleville.

The official was asked if the reason for the move was to free the Douglas-Belleville location for development of a downtown transit terminal.

City planning and traffic officials approached by the Times were unaware of the pending property transaction, and said there had been no recent communication from transit-bureau director Victor Parker concerning plans for a downtown depot.

An official in Hydro's property development department in Vancouver said a number of tenants occupying premises in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel area on short-term leases have had their former tenancy agreements terminated and have been asked to contact Hydro to indicate whether they wish to continue renting.

Bob Shanks, owner of Shanks' saddlery store at Douglas and Market, said his business will continue at that location for the foreseeable future and he has been instructed to "pay our rent to Hydro."

Other business tenants include the Empress Paints store at 720 Market.

Dave Suttle, Hydro transit manager in Victoria, said the "major part of the property" will be developed for use by the bureau of transit, while other temporary uses of the site would be related to "internal changes in our organization."

He gave no details, but another source told the times that Hydro's line and construction departments may make interim use of the site.

Library, CUPE Settle

A settlement has been reached between the Greater Victoria Library Board and its 60 CUPE local 410 employees, board negotiating team chairman Shirley Dowell said today.

Though no official word has been received from the union, Dowell said she has heard local members voted in favor Monday of mediator Clark Gilmour's recommendations.

She said salary increases agreed about 16 per cent, and "clerk-ones" the lowest paid library employees will go from $425 per month to a figure over $500.

All employees' working hours will be cut from 37 1/2 hours a week to 35, she said.

Dowell stressed no official word had been received but said, "I think it should be made public."

She has pressed for open negotiations, refused by the union, since the board began to discuss contract talks in October.

"If Shirley said there's an agreement, it's an agreement by the union," said board chairman Gordon Hutcheson today.

"It seems to me all we've got is a little more than a rumor."

Hutcheson added the board will likely go along with the agreement proposed by the mediator.

If federal cabinet ministers are trying to put down the importance of the Berger inquiry as charged by NDP Parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent and others, the judge could claim victory Tuesday.

Through commission counsel Ian Scott, the inquiry was told that Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan pledged earlier in the day that all expert witnesses in the federal public service will be made available at government expense to the inquiry.

Scott also said the inquiry was accepting an invitation by Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve to make available all of the studies and experts in her department dealing with the pipeline.

HE TEACHES 'ART FORM'

Master Gets His Kicks

By HOY-YIN DER
Times Staff

Neither age nor language is an impediment to Kung-Fu master Wong Sheung.

At 51, Wong looks more like a man in his late thirties because of a rigorous fitness routine he maintains to perform the ancient martial art.

The Hong Kong native is up at five every morning — but that's a soft touch compared to his life in the Crown colony.

"I used to get up at 3 a.m. there," he said in an interview. "Now, I suppose I'm getting old."

Wong explained that Kung-Fu is not simply an art of self-defence, as many believe. He says it is a daily physical and mental exercise with the goal of "uniting the mind and body as one."

Only if one is attacked is the martial art used for self-defence, and even then, it is used only to disarm the attacker and never to kill.

He feels an integral part of Kung-Fu is a philosophy which encompasses compassion for mankind, truthfulness and modesty.

Wong emigrated to Canada six months ago.

In Hong Kong, he operated a Kung-Fu school. He also taught in China before the communist takeover.

He hopes to start a school in Victoria.

Wong, who speaks only Chinese, believes the art bypasses all language barriers.

"Like music and painting,

it is an international art," he says.

He quotes an ancient Chinese saying: "Say hoj je noy ga heng dy," meaning "We are all brothers within the four seas."

"My father taught me the art as a child ... he learned from the Buddhist monks of Shau Lin Temple, where the art was developed thousands of years ago."

The temple is copied in Kung-Fu television and movie productions, which Wong feels are "quite good."

Wong says it takes about three years of continuous practice just to learn the fundamentals of Kung-Fu. The foundation is the horse stand.

"If your horse stand is poor, you will never excel in the art."

"As a child, my father had me do the horse stand for hours on end, utilizing all muscles from the feet through the legs, thighs, waist and shoulders."

Reflexes must also be developed. The first stage is to go outdoors each morning and fix one's eyes at the rising sun.

"Also, during the night, one breathes stale air. This is expelled with the fresh air of the morning and the mind and body is ready for a new day."

Next, eye muscle exercises are done. The eye must be trained to follow moving images while the head remains still.

Wong says that through many years of training, one should be able to follow with the eyes a mouse darting across a darkened room.

Wong is instructing 25 Chinese males between the ages of 11 and 35. When his school is established, he also hopes to teach non-Chinese — including women.

To be dedicated to learning the art, all students must spend at least three two-hour sessions at the studio, but six days a week attendance is preferable.

Gov't Zoning Control Threat

The provincial government may move to exert control over municipal planning and zoning if certain local governments continue to block new housing developments, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said "three or four" municipalities have been blocking or purposely delaying applications for new housing developments to prevent huge influxes of people into their areas.

Some municipalities charge developers impose fees, said Lorimer, which are meant to compensate for increased services necessitated by new housing areas.

But in some cases the extra fees have not been directly related to costs caused by the new developments and the fees have been a heavy burden for developers, he said.

Hundreds of developments have been affected in this way, he said, but most municipalities are not involved.

Lorimer pointed out that Ontario has legislation which gives the government some form of final control over municipal zoning and planning decision and warned that B.C. may have to take that route.

He said it might not have to be applied in a blanket way but could be applied only to those municipalities which are blocking developments.

Asked outside the house if this could be termed a veiled threat to local governments to shape up, Lorimer said it was more like an "unveiled threat."

Lorimer would not name the municipalities involved.

Mines Deputy Named

Hart Horn, the former executive assistant to Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, has been appointed an associate deputy within the mines department.

Nimsick said in an interview Tuesday his department has been re-organized into three branches with Horn as associate deputy of the newest branch, operations.

Dr. J. T. Fyles will continue as associate deputy in charge of mines. John Lineham associate deputy in charge of petroleum resources and John McMynn will continue as a full deputy in charge of all three branches.

Horn, 38, was originally hired by the NDP soon after it came to office to serve as Nimsick's executive assistant, a job usually considered a political appointment.

In November, 1973, Horn resigned as executive assistant and took over a civil service job as director of the revenue branch in charge of collecting mineral royalties.

In his new role, Horn will be in charge of operations, said Nimsick, which will include administration, economic development and revenues.

As director of revenues, Horn earned $20,000 and $23,000 and Nimsick said the new job will pay a different salary, but it has not been determined yet.

Horn has a masters degree in economics from the University of Calgary.

$70,200 ROLLS A SELL-OUT

LONDON (UPI) — Rolls-Royce came out with its latest model today, a two-door luxury car that costs $70,200 including tax — and already is sold out for at least a year.

Sight unseen, 120 persons from the Shah of Iran to anonymous U.S. businessmen have filed orders for the carpeted, air-conditioned, stereo-equipped, leather-upholstered, walnut-paneled, 17-foot Camargue.

The automobile, named for a region of southern France, will get 14 miles to the gallon.

Each car takes six months to assemble. Production at first is at the rate of one a week, later to go to two a week, meaning it will be at least a year before the first wave of orders are filled.

The company reckons the first Camargues could fetch nearly $100,000 on the automobile black market.

The Camargue is the result of three years of secret designing, research and testing. It is of Italian design, with the 17-foot body of soft aluminum done in Britain. The radio and quadraphonic stereo is from West Germany.

With a 6,750-cu. in. aluminum alloy V-8 engine, automatic transmission, fully independent suspension, power steering and disc brakes, the Camargue can reach 120 miles an hour.

Rolls said it contains more engineering and electronic sophistication than has been packed into any other car. It is said to "think" for itself, even tightening the passenger's seat belts on tight turns.

The walnut paneling is from trees hand-picked in Italy. The upholstery is from a special herd of Rolls-Royce cattle kept behind electronic fences and not barbed wire so as not to mar the hide.

"You must not look upon a Rolls-Royce as a car, as a collection of metal and brilliant ideas," company official Evan Morsians said. "It's a dream."

Wider Harbor Probe

OTTAWA (UPI) — The RCMP has broadened its investigation into harbor dredging contracts beyond Hamilton, Ont., and Quebec City, solicitor-general Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

It would hamper the police investigations into price-fixing of contracts if he was to divulge where the probes were taking place, he added.

Three persons have been convicted and two others are awaiting trial on a variety of charges, including fraud, as a result of the police investigation into irregularities at the Hamilton harbor.

Allmand said the police probe in Hamilton led to the investigation at Quebec City since some of the dredging companies working in Hamilton were involved also in dredging work at Ille d'Orleans near Quebec City.

"And now there's been evidence that leads them to suspect some matters in other places," he said.

"These suspicions could prove negative or positive. But because there is certain evidence that there might be something wrong, they are investigating."

U.S. Evacuation Plans Prepared

Times News Services

The U.S. carrier Okinawa with helicopters and 1,500 marines aboard has been ordered into the Gulf of Thailand as a precaution to evacuate Americans from the besieged Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh if necessary, Pentagon sources said today.

As a last resort, the marines would go in to secure the airport at Phnom Penh, to allow evacuation of civilians by military transport, the sources said.

Contingency planning for the evacuation of some 400 to 500 Americans still in Phnom Penh called for a four-step operation, according to the situation, they added.

The Pentagon stressed that all alternatives were contingency plans and no evacuation has actually been or denied.

Meanwhile, Communist insurgents brought up guns to within four miles of the Phnom Penh airport today and slammed in a barrage of artillery, rockets and recoilless rifle fire that halted all commercial air traffic.

The barrage did not slow the U.S. airlift of rice, ammunition and gasoline. Commercial planes chartered by the U.S. military took off and landed at the rate of one every eight minutes.

One plane was hit by rocket shrapnel and sustained minor damage, but flew back to Saigon safely.

Military officers said five persons were killed and at least five wounded in attacks on the airport.

The last commercial flight into the airport today was an Air Cambodia twin-engine jet Caravelle.

Passengers aboard the plane said they saw two rocket bursts from the air while the plane circled to land and another burst as they filed into the heavily sandbagged last week.

In a related Washington development, the State Department says that when Congress cut off the bombing of Cambodia in 1973, it "aborted" a promising effort by Henry Kissinger to negotiate a peace settlement.

Spokesman Robert Anderson was not specific Tuesday in his public response to a request for new diplomatic efforts from a congressional group which visited Indochina last week.

He said Kissinger tried continually in the past two years to get peace in Cambodia.

MOUNTIES TAKE OVER ABOARD THE ANSWER

Times News Services

GASPE, Que. — Royal Canadian Mounted Police today took control of the runaway freighter — Answer which has landed authorities on an 11-day chase through the ice floes of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The takeover apparently ended the ship's dash for freedom which began when Erb and his crew sailed it out of Quebec City Feb. 23.

Hydro Eyes Terminal Site

B.C. Hydro is negotiating to purchase property on the east side of Douglas Street, across from its Gärbally Road bus garage, in what appears to be the first move toward establishment of a downtown transit terminal.

Hydro and transit bureau officials confirmed today that the property in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel-Topaz block is being acquired, but declined to say for what specific purpose it will be used.

However, a spokesman in the office of Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said it is intended to relocate to that site the provincially-owned Vancouver Island Coach Lines bus garage, which now occupies property leased from Canadian Pacific at Douglas and Belleville.

The official was asked if the reason for the move was to free the Douglas-Belleville location for development of a downtown transit terminal, and replied that it "paves the way" for that possibility.

For well over a year the provincial transit bureau has been studying possible sites for such a depot, and at one time was considering adapting the old Crystal Garden building. But the city of Victoria, owners of the property, made it clear the proposal was unacceptable.

City planning and traffic officials approached by the Times were unaware of the pending property transaction, and said there had been no recent communication from transit bureau director Victor Parker concerning plans for a downtown depot.

An official in Hydro's property development department in Vancouver said a number of tenants occupying premises in the Douglas-Market-Quesnel area on short-term leases have had their former tenancy agreements terminated and have been asked to contact Hydro to indicate whether they wish to continue renting.

Bob Shanks, owner of Shanks' saddlery store at Douglas and Market, said his business will continue at that location for the foreseeable future and he has been instructed to "pay our rent to Hydro."

Other business tenants include the Empress Paints store at 720 Market.

Dave Sutte, Hydro transit manager in Victoria, said the "major part of the property" will be developed for use by the bureau of transit, while other temporary uses of the site would be related to "internal changes in our organization."

He gave no details, but another source told the Times that Hydro's line and construction departments may "make interim use of the site."

Library, CUPE Settle

A settlement has been reached between the Greater Victoria Library Board and its 60 CUPE local 410 employees, board negotiating team chairman Shirley Dowell said today.

Though no official word has been received from the union, Dowell said she has heard local members voted in favor Monday of mediator Clark Gilmore's recommendations.

She said salary increases averaged about 16 per cent, and "clerk ones," the lowest paid library employees will go from $425 per month to a figure over $500.

All employees' working hours will be cut from 37½ hours a week to 35, she said.

Dowell stressed no official word had been received but said, "I think it should be made public."

She has pressed for open negotiations, refused by the union, since the board began to discuss contract talks in October.

"If Shirley said there's an agreement, it's an agreement by the union," said board chairman Gordon Hutcheson today.

"It seems to me all we've got is a little more than a rumor."

Hutcheson added the board will likely go along with the agreement proposed by the mediator.

ARCTIC HAUL OF HASHISH

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Two men were in RCMP custody today following the discovery during a routine customs check of 350 pounds of what police described as "presumably" hashish.

RCMP inspector Al Baugh said it was the "largest seizure" in the history of the Arctic.

RCMP spokesman said 350 pounds of hashish would have a street-value of between $500,000 and $1.5 million.

BERGER PROBE PLOWING AHEAD

YELLOKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — It was business as usual here Tuesday as Mr. Justice Thomas Berger resumed his inquiry into an application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. for a right-of-way across Crown lands for a 2,600-mile natural gas pipeline through Northern Canada.

If federal cabinet ministers are trying to put down the importance of the Berger inquiry as charged by NDP Parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent and others, the judge could claim victory Tuesday.

Through commission counsel Ian Scott, the inquiry was told that Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan pledged earlier in the day that all expert witnesses in the federal public service will be made available at government expense to the inquiry.

Scott also said the inquiry was accepting an invitation by Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve to make available all of the studies and experts in her department dealing with the pipeline.

School Hours Increased As Talks Break Again

The Greater Victoria school board has stepped up its emergency teaching program in the face of a second breakdown in talks aimed at settling the region's 38-day civic strike-lockout.

After provincial mediator Clark Gilmour withdrew Tuesday from talks between the civic employers and CUPE's bargaining committee, trustees decided to stretch the program from one hour to three hours daily in 42 of the district's 57 schools. The plan starts Thursday.

School District 61 chairman Bill Ross said schools with automatic heating may remain open all day if there is sufficient response to an appeal for volunteer janitors from the community at large. Others may go to two hours at the discretion of principals.

Ross said more than 20,000 pupils in the district would benefit by a tripling of current emergency hours.

Where response to COPE is poor, schools will revert to one-hour day, and where education levels suffer there could be makeup classes after the dispute is resolved.

Ross said the reason some schools will not be extended to longer hours is "not because they are old or are located in an old neighborhood, rather that it would be asking students and teachers to work in uncomfortably low temperatures, which would be unfair and perhaps unhealthy."

Spokesman Bill Stavdal said later that response to the appeal for help this morning was incomplete. Three people have been taking scores of names by phone and the total

Logging and sawmill activity continues on a reduced scale. A modest increase in orders for wood products is expected in the spring.

The Victoria area is moving into its busy construction period for houses but work is being hampered by the continuing strike of civic workers.

Autoplan Blamed for February Sales Slump

Sales were down for Victoria furniture and department stores in February and some retailers blamed car insurance renewals for draining off funds that normally would have gone into consumer goods, according to a survey by Canada Manpower.

"Business was rather spotty and several dealers reported that they felt sales were in fact slowing down," Manpower information director John Atcheson said.

Car insurance premiums had to be paid in full this year rather than being financed through the Royal Bank as in 1974.

The effect of paying in full was to remove $110 million from the provincial economy in February, according to a department store chain. About $13 million was removed from the Victoria economy in insurance premiums, the Canada Manpower report says.

There is an ongoing demand for waiters, waitresses, housekeepers, day workers, auto mechanics, insurance salesmen and workers in the engineering professions.

About 30 new listings come in each day for these type of jobs.

Broadmead Stables will offer a Schooling Show Sunday, March 16th starting at 9 a.m. The usual classes will be offered and the indoor arena will be used to assure good footing and protection from the elements.

Plans are well in hand and programmes should be mailed out shortly for the Annual Cowichan Pony Club Easter Show, held at Duncan at the Exhibition Grounds. This Show for Junior riders only is always the first of the year's recognized Shows on Vancouver Island and draws many entries from the Mainland as well as the Victoria area.

The Saanich Fair Board is finalizing plans for their Summer Horse Show and have engaged the services of Peter Cameron of St. Catharines, Ont. to Judge. Cameron was most popular as Judge at the Vancouver Island Arabian

Sooke Saddle Club is having its regular monthly meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the clubhouse on Otter Point Road.

Plans will be finalized for a Sunday fun day to be held March 9 at the club ring on Otter Point Road.

English and Western events for both juniors and seniors will be held. Entrants will be able to register at 10 a.m. when the event starts.

Because it is the club's first event of the year, events won't be too tightly scheduled so as to give the horses a first workout, and let folks get acquainted.

"This is just for fun-ribbons no trophies," says Dorothy Murphy, club spokesman. Further information can be obtained by calling her at 642-5930.

In purchasing a Western type saddle the position of the rigging should be checked to assure that it suits the conformation of the horse. In the more expensive Western saddles now being offered it is possible to obtain rigging that allows a choice of girth attachment position. The advantage of the old fashioned "centre-fire" rigging is being recognized again.

Supreme Verdict, the Thoroughbred that ran in the 1958 English Derby, and was brought to Victoria by the late James Audain shortly after, changed hands at the recent dispersal sale of the Livingstone Park Equestrian Centre at Langley. Supreme Verdict will be sent to stand for Thoroughbred Breeders in Saskatchewan.

A. H. Getson, local riding enthusiast, became a breeder of Thoroughbreds with the purchase of the mare "Hume Donna", in foal to Supreme Verdict and to foal this Spring. R. G. Shanks purchased Leeds Star a mare that should foal to Supreme Verdict later this month.
